Italy Holds Troops Ready For Action in Rebel Defeat

Rome Reports Soldiers Massed Awaiting Word From Il Duce.

England Rejects 'Stern Measures'

The Situation Abroad.

Premier Mussolini was reported to have concentrated new divisions of Italian troops to send to Spain if the rebels suffer another major setback.

Great Britain, rejecting a Spanish government demand for "stern measures" against Italy, appeared to have lessened Europe's war scare.

The Spanish government claimed its second major victory within a week. Resignation of the cabinet of Socialist Catalonia was unexplained.

Troops Massed.

By the United Press.

Rome, March 26.—Premier Mussolini was reported tonight to have concentrated new divisions of Italian troops for immediate dispatch to Spain if the rebel generalissimo, Francisco Franco, suffers another major setback.

The troops, it was said, are at mobilization points and are ready to embark whenever Il Duce gives order.

Mussolini's decision was believed by diplomats to be dependent, not only upon the course of Franco's Fascist revolution in Spain, but the extent to which Great Britain and France are prepared to go in opposing Italian intervention.

The Italian dictator's position was described as being in a delicate balance.

He can not retreat from the position he has taken in Spain in support of the insurgents, it was pointed out, but he is determined to act with caution in an effort to escape shouldering the blame for a general European war.

Diplomats believed that Mussolini's course depends largely upon the British attitude and whether she will use restraining pressure upon Paris and Moscow to keep the international non-intervention committee in London from blowing up.

Report Il Duce Worried.

Until yesterday, it was reported Mussolini was acutely worried by the anti-Fascist campaign led by Russia and France, fearing that London might give her support to Paris-Moscow agitation for a naval blockade against Italy.

Today, however, it was believed that Il Duce had received assurances that Britain would refuse to participate in any such action and that the recent Anglo-Italian accord, recognizing each other's rights in the Mediterranean, still stood with all its original strength.

Observers credited Mussolini's preparations for a bold move to the fact that he has protected his Adriatic flank by the new politico-commercial treaty with Yugoslavia, a rapprochement which Italian newspapers predicted tonight would be followed by an Italo-Turkish pact.

If the agreements signed in Belgrade yesterday actually enter into effect they will, according to diplomats, greatly alter the political and commercial lineups of central and southeastern Europe.

Politically, Italy will enjoy security along the Adriatic coastline and, commercially, she will increase her chances of penetrating into the Balkans. After settling his differences with Turkey, Mussolini is expected to concentrate upon Rumania and later on Czechoslovakia.

Loyalists Claim Victory.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, March 26.—The Spanish government claimed tonight its second major victory within a week in a smashing drive against insurgent positions outside Pozoblanco, 150 miles southwest of Madrid.

Jubilantly the Madrid defense junta announced that the Italian-

Skipper's 'Ham' Radio Call Saves 16 on Sinking Vessel

By the Associated Press.

Boston, March 26.—Sixteen shipwrecked mariners landed here in safety today because a youthful skipper of a little Norwegian tramp spent hours off watch learning something about the science of wireless telegraphy.

He is Capt. Bjarne Sverdrup, 30, a seafarer since 18, who, until she sank almost beneath his feet last Tuesday, was master of the 38-year-old Ireighter Bjerkli.

It was he, Capt. Sverdrup modestly admitted, coming up the harbor today on the Coast Guard cutter Chelan, who tapped out the ragged dots and dashes of a distress call which diverted a dozen liners and freighters from their courses to seek the Bjerkli as she foundered in a winter gale 650 miles east of Boston.

Crack operators of other vessels, who heard his uncertain signals, described them as "amateurish," but Capt. Sverdrup doesn't mind being known as a "ham" operator.

He brought the Chelan alongside a few hours before the Bjerkli poked her stubby bow under the sea and disappeared.

"While I was third officer on another ship," the captain explained,

Capital's Easter Forecast Is Fair But Freezing

A fair but freezing Easter was definitely in prospect last night.

At 6 p. m., as the mercury dropped to 31 degrees, smudge fires were relighted around the Tidal Basin to protect the Japanese cherry trees.

The official "high" yesterday was 39, compared with 70 on Thursday, and the Weather Bureau predicted a drop to 25 degrees or lower by sunrise today.

Meanwhile thousands of holiday visitors were descending upon the Capital to find hotel rooms at a premium. Headquarters of the Washington Hotel Association reported sell-out business was general.

Buds Escape Blast.

Seventy-five National Capital Parks workmen were on duty at the Tidal Basin late yesterday as orders were given to set off the 150 smudge drums. Their use early yesterday in freezing temperatures was given credit for the buds emerging uninjured.

Parks officials said the fires would be kept going all night and, if the temperature warrants, during the day. Additional drums were borrowed yesterday, to be filled with old rubber tires, fuel oil and other combustibles that give off dense smoke.

Readings Below Zero.

Not only in the Nation's Capital was a frigid Easter anticipated. Readings were below normal throughout the country, except for the South Atlantic and Pacific States.

Below zero temperatures were reported to the Weather Bureau by

Jews of World Open Eight-Day Passover Feast

The eight-day celebration of Passover, commemorating the exodus of the Jews from Egypt more than 34 centuries ago, was begun last night in Washington and throughout the world.

First at church services and then at Seder rites in the home, rich in symbolism, the thousands of Jews in the Capital ushered in the traditional holiday. The keynote of the sermons was the anti-Semitism of Central Europe, especially Germany, and the need for funds to aid refugees.

Orthodox Jews will repeat the home Seder service tonight. Those of the reformed faith observe only one Seder, that on the first night.

In this ceremony the head of the family, reading from the "Haggadah," recites the pilgrimage of the Israelites, led by Moses, to the Promised Land. All members at the festal table take part in the service.

Instead of bread, matzos is eaten in remembrance of the fleeing Hebrews who hastily prepared this kind of unleavened bread which was baked on boards in the sun. Not only at the Seder dinner but for the duration of the holiday matzos is substituted for regular bread and all foods must be especially prepared.

The Passover, or Pesach, practically always coincides with the Easter holidays, the dates of both being fixed by the lunar calendar. The observance will end at sundown next Saturday.

Opening services were held last night at the Washington Hebrew Congregation (reformed) and in the California Editor Covers Story Of His Own Fatal Wounding

Alturas, Calif., March 26 (AP).—A coroner's jury investigated today the gunshot death of Claude L. McCracken, 46, newspaper editor, who "covered" the story of his fatal wounding before he died in a hospital where his wife attended him as a nurse on duty.

Sheriff John Sharp, who said the shooting climaxed a long-drawn newspaper feud, held Harry French, 30, State employe and son of a rival publisher, on an open charge pending formal action.

French, who surrendered voluntarily, is the son of Bard French, publisher of the Alturas Weekly Plain Dealer.

"The papers have been battling back and forth on every issue that has come up," said Sheriff John C. Sharp. "I think the shooting was due to hard feelings aroused by this rivalry."

McCracken was shot down in his home last night while dining with Miss Donna Conwell, his business partner, and a family friend, Miss Evelyn Olin.

The sheriff said the attacker entered the house unbidden and started shooting.

Speed Urged On Court Plan Amendment

O'Mahoney Favors New Method; Compromises Flood Senate.

By Robert C. Albright.

Use of an untried amendment method to bring quick ratification or rejection by the States of judiciary reform proposals yesterday was discussed in the Senate by friends and opponents of the President's court plan.

Suggestion for speedy amendment action was accompanied by a new influx of constitutional amendment proposals by opposition Senators. They claimed their substitute plans would accomplish the "new blood" objectives of the President.

The never-used amendment procedure was put forward in answer to Administration claims that a constitutional amendment would encounter indefinite delays.

O'Mahoney Defends Method.

It calls for submission by Congress of amendments directly to State conventions on a specified date, with Congress itself, rather than the States, providing the convention setups and designating the number of delegates at large to be chosen at special elections.

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, noncommittal on the President's court bill, vigorously argued before newspapermen the constitutionality of such a procedure to insure prompt action on amendments. The method has never been employed.

O'Mahoney said he was convinced that "liberals" in Congress could agree on a constitutional amendment that would meet the court issue.

"It must be a simple amendment," he said, "that one who runs may read."

Coincident with this suggestion, Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), Texas, an opponent of the court bill, proposed a constitutional amendment to provide voluntary retirement of justices at 70, compulsory retirement at 75, and a Supreme Court membership fixed at nine.

Sees Roosevelt Satisfied.

Connally said it "just so happens" this proposal would carry out the President's objectives, by permitting immediate appointment of four justices to succeed those over 75.

"I do not want it regarded as a compromise, because I am not weakening in my opposition to the President's proposal," said the Texan. "The big advantage of my proposal is—it would give the people a chance to say whether they want it or not. And it would be a permanent, not a temporary, reform."

Senator Edward R. Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, a leader of the opposition, was revising his retirement amendment along slightly different lines. Burke would provide by amendment for retirement of present justices at 75, but would "stagger" the retirements over a period of years, so that no more than two would occur in the first year.

Williams Fight Develops.

A Senate fight on the President's promotion of a 68-year-old Federal judge, Robert Lee Williams, to the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals, with the understanding that he would retire on reaching 70, meanwhile was developing.

Williams' nomination, involving a $2,000 salary increase for life and

Boy, 11, Is Killed When Playmate's Pistol Discharges

Eleven-year-old Robert McFarland Russell, son of Dr. and Mrs. A. E. Russell, of 1870 Wyoming avenue northwest, was killed instantly last night when a gun in the hands of a playmate was discharged.

The tragedy occurred at the home of William F. Ham, former president of the Washington Railway and Electric Co., and chairman of the board of the Potomac Electric Power Co.

Police said Robert had been a dinner guest of the Ham boys—Richard, 13, and Patten, 10. After dinner his boy hosts took him to the second floor to examine the gun collection.

Richard, police said, pulled a .22-caliber pistol from the drawer and playfully brandished it.

Then he accidentally pulled the trigger.

Robert sank to the floor without a sound.

Only last Monday Robert celebrated his eleventh birthday. He was a student in Mrs. Cooke's School, and would have been graduated this spring.

He and Patten Ham were schoolmates.

Dr. Russell is attached to the U. S. Public Health Service. Both Dr. and Mrs. Russell were prostrated with grief last night. Robert was born in Barre, Vt.

After the tragedy, Richard Ham, grief-stricken, was released in the custody of his parents.

Southern R.R. Will Spend $14,000,000

Railway, 'Broke' in '32, Offers Cash for New Rolling Stock.

Bids Climax Comeback, Illustrate the South's Recovery Trend.

By Eugene Warner.

Southern Railway, almost broke five years ago, yesterday called for bids for $14,000,000 worth of new equipment for which it will pay spot cash.

Southern's spectacular comeback throws the spotlight on a railroad and industrial drama of deep import to the South.

Consistently out of the red after a long period of heavy deficits, Southern's experience is typical of the recovery of many great lines throughout the country, and the South in particular.

Southern's outlook was gloomy in 1932. Struggling under an unusually heavy funded debt, its securities almost at absolute bottom, hard pressed to pay interest on its bonds, and traffic falling off steadily, the outlook was discouraging.

Reflecting the gloominess of the outlook was the price of stocks and bonds in the dark days of '32. Common was down to 2½ from a high in 1928 of 165⅝. Preferred, which had sold four years previously at 102¼, was begging for buyers at 3. Bonds were in a similar plight.

Stock at High Level.

Friday those securities had climbed back to a more satisfactory position. Common closed at 40, preferred at 54¾, and bonds were up to 82½ after their all-time low in 1928 of 5.

Decision to purchase $14,000,000 worth of new equipment was made March 22, and competitive bids were asked on 2,500 new box cars, 500 automobile cars, 1,100 hopper cars and 1,500 gondola cars. The company apparently is so completely recovered it can pay cash instead of issuing securities to finance the purchases.

Two factors contributed to the growth in revenues of such railroads as the Southern, for which, incidentally, net operating income for February, 1937, was $1,835,000, double the figure for the same month a year ago. Those factors were general recovery and rapid industrialization of the South.

National recovery was first felt in the South, due to the expenditure of millions in Federal funds in an area which never before had enjoyed such an influx of dollars. Federal money was spent there in proportion to the need rather than in proportion to the amount of Federal taxes paid the Government by Southern States.

Recovery Factors Listed.

The Bankhead act, which raised the price of cotton from bankruptcy levels to clear profit levels; the tobacco restriction act, the millions spent in electrification projects, the rebound of the building industry, which recently has kept Southern flat cars loaded with lumber and mining products, and an increase in passenger traffic by Southern's reduction of rates to 1½ cents a mile (long before the I. C. C. forced Northern roads to cut to 2 cents a mile), were all heavy factors in the comeback of the road.

Of parallel importance is the movement of industry from the North, largely accelerated by the textile business, which put freight revenues into Southern cash registers which formerly were spent in New England. The past 15 years has seen a constantly swelling tide

Auto Strike Near End, Gov. Murphy Reports; Parley Reopens Today

Miss Perkins Upholds Courts In Evicting Sit-Down Strikers

Answering Attack in House, She Says Officials Must Be Obedient to Law; Roosevelt Parley to Be Held Today.

By Sidney Olson.

Recommending strongly to employers "the use of the collective bargaining principle" to avoid "costly strikes and lockouts," Secretary of Labor Perkins yesterday asserted disobedience to court orders evacuating sit-down strikers from plants should never "be counseled by a Government official."

Her statement was made in the course of an extended reply to Representative McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, who had assailed Miss Perkins as having made "inciting remarks" on sit-down strikes.

Quoting herself as having told reporters "the legality of this sit-down method has not yet been determined by the courts," the secretary added:

"Since that time the Michigan courts have taken final action in ordering the evacuation of plants and I have never questioned that these decrees were within the competent jurisdiction of these courts."

Miss Perkins' remarks were regarded as of high significance, coming upon the eve of President Roosevelt's return here today for a scheduled 5 p. m. conference with Congressional leaders, in which it has been stated sit-down strikes will be discussed.

Earlier yesterday Vice President Garner, as presiding officer of the Senate, had received from President Emeritus A. Lawrence Lowell, of Harvard University, a telegram de-

2 Authorities Say Ice Caused Plane Tragedy

Formations on Ailerons, Wings Blamed in Crash Killing 13.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, March 26.—Two separate investigations today attributed the crash of the Transcontinental and Western Airlines plane in which 13 persons were killed to the formation of ice on the air liner's control equipment.

While Federal and State aeronautical inspectors searched through the twisted wreckage of the giant twin-motored transport that nosed into a corn field last night, officials of T. W. A. said ice had formed on the ailerons and sent the plane out of control.

Dr. John J. McLean, director of the Allegheny County Airport, where the plane had attempted to land a few moments before the crash, said the disaster was caused by the ice collecting on the wings.

Safety Devices Planned.

L. C. Fritz, Eastern region superintendent of the airline, said new safety measures would be developed to prevent a repetition of the tragedy, declaring:

"Never before in tests or in scheduled flying has ice formed on the ailerons to an extent that interfered with normal flight.

"However, the unusual ice formation causing this accident indicates that protection against icing must be extended to include ailerons, and T. W. A. is taking immediate steps to develop this additional safeguard."

Company officials said only the ice would explain why Pilot F. L. (Larry) Bohnet and the 12 others crashed to their deaths a few minutes after he had circled the airport and radioed that all was "O.K."

Capt. A. M. Wilkins, pilot of the T. W. A. plane on Flight 6, witnessed the crash from the air. He said he sighted the other plane while he was about ten miles from the airport, adding:

Nebraska's Rejection of Amendment Hurts Chance of Quick Action.

Rejection by Nebraska's unicameral Legislature yesterday of the child labor amendment rendered it unlikely ratification of the amendment can be completed this year, Katharine Lenroot, chief of the Federal Children's Bureau, said yesterday.

"While it is possible ratification can be completed, I don't think eight States can be induced to act this year," said Miss Lenroot, regarded as a spokesman for friends of the amendment. Approval by eight States is yet required before the amendment can become part of the Constitution.

Congress submitted the amendment to the States 13 years ago. The question of Federal regulation of child labor reappeared in the Senate this week when Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, offered a new amendment. Whereas the amendment now before the States would give Congress the power to limit, regulate and prohibit the labor of persons under 18 years of age, Borah would set the age at 14.

He said one of the principal objections to the pending amendment was that the age limit was set so high. He added that he was a believer in prohibition of child labor, but not of the labor "of young men and women."

Miss Lenroot, however, urged supporters to continue to fight for the present amendment on the ground that it would permit Congress to raise standards in the future when public opinion calls for such adjustments, without having to pass additional amendments.

Robert A. Taft May Run For Senate Seat in '38

Cleveland, March 26 (AP).—Robert A. Taft, of Cincinnati, son of William Howard Taft, said today he was "seriously considering becoming a candidate" for the United States Senate in 1938.

"I came to Cleveland," said Taft, "to discuss the possibility of my candidacy with Republican leaders, but it is a long time ahead, and I do not intend to decide the matter at the moment."

New Police Traffic Supervisor Expected to Reorganize Staff

By Howard F. Wentworth.

(Winner of first prize in the Nation-wide C. I. T. Safety Contest with his 1936 series appearing in The Post.)

A general reorganization of the police traffic division was hinted last night as Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, announced the appointment of Inspector William E. Holmes as new traffic supervisor.

Inspector Holmes, who takes the reins of District traffic control on April 1, is expected to institute new policies and increase efficiency within the division. A definite highway safety program is expected to be outlined, and policemen assigned to traffic duty will begin a renewed drive against lawlessness.

In his administration of traffic control activities, the new supervisor will be given a free hand, Maj. Brown said last night. Any change or reorganization in traffic enforcement policies will be left entirely to Inspector Holmes' discretion, Maj. Brown added.

The police department—as in years past—will continue to seek an augmented traffic squad, it was learned. Pressure from all quarters will be brought to bear in efforts to obtain adequate safety protection for Washington streets.

More than ever, traffic policemen will be impressed with the necessity of saving lives and ridding the city of motoring recklessness, officials indicated.

Inspector Holmes was selected for the job after serious consideration by Maj. Brown and the District Commisioners. Although the qualifications of numerous other candidates were discussed, it was agreed that Holmes was better fitted for the position from the standpoint of experience and interest in local traffic problems.

Inspector Benjamin A. Lamb will remain in command of traffic enforcement until the first of the month. He will then be transferred to head the third inspection district, present assignment of Inspector Holmes.

Weakened by failing health, Inspector Lamb requested the transfer and is expected to take an extended vacation before assuming his new duties.

Attached to various downtown precincts during the last 12 years, Inspector Holmes has wide experience in handling traffic problems. As a captain, he commanded the Chrysler, Union Heads Hold Long Session in Guarded Room.

Progress Is Made In Negotiations

By the Associated Press.

Lansing, Mich., March 26.—Gov. Frank Murphy, "optimistic and hopeful" of a settlement ending the 19-day Chrysler automobile strike, held Chrysler Corporation executives and union leaders together in a prolonged conference behind closely-guarded doors today.

"Not a great deal separates them," said Murphy, emerging from the conference room tonight after adjournment had been taken until 10 a. m. tomorrow. "Progress was made. Both sides are striving earnestly to reach a settlement."

The red-haired Governor, seeking to mediate the second major automotive labor dispute of the year, pointed the conferees toward an agreement which he expected to provide a basis for settlement of at least two other strikes, those in Hudson and Reo Motor Co. plants.

Walter P. Chrysler, chairman of the automobile concern, and John L. Lewis, whose Committee for Industrial Organization is supporting the striking United Automobile Workers of America, headed the negotiators.

Two brief meetings Wednesday, at Murphy's invitation, produced a truce under which more than 6,000 sit-down strikers defying orders of a Detroit court, abandoned their positions in eight Chrysler plants.

The U. A. W. A., claiming 59,000 members in Chrysler plants, called the strike when corporation executives refused its demand for recognition as sole bargaining agency for all workers.

Settlement of this dispute, with a provision for return to work pending adjustment of other demands relating to seniority, wages and working conditions, would start production wheels moving again in ten Chrysler plants, eight of them evacuated by strikers in Detroit yesterday.

In addition to the more than 60,000 Chrysler employes such an arrangement would return to their jobs, about 19,400 Briggs Manufacturing Co. workers, making bodies for Chrysler cars, would end a period of enforced idleness.

Gov. Murphy has conferred with officials of the Hudson Motor Car Co. at Detroit.

Produce Men Strike.

By the Associated Press.

Developments yesterday on the labor front:

Buffalo, N. Y., produce handlers, variously estimated to number between 200 and 600, paralyzed wholesale Easter trade in fruit and vegetables there by launchng a strike. Three trucks were attacked. One was overturned.

A strike vote was started among 8,000 union employes of the Southern Pacific Railroad on the West Coast. Brotherhood spokesmen charged the road had violated pay agreements and had failed to recognize the brotherhoods in labor disputes.

A short-lived "sit-down" involving from 250 to 500 employes of the Chevrolet parts plant at Bay City, Mich., ended in an agreement to negotiate differences.

State patrolmen turned back approximately 300 pickets who attempted a demonstration near an Auburn, Me., shoe factory in a strike called by the Committee for Industrial Organization in 19 shoe mills here and in Lewiston. Unionists claimed 2,000 were out. Manufacturers placed the number at 600.

Some 50 women who had penetrated picket lines at a Memphis, Tenn., dress shop elected to stay in the plant and work indefinitely.

The C. I. O. called off a 22-day strike at the Lebanon, Pa., works of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation. Longshoremen who had tied up ships in Oakland and San Francisco for a half day returned to duty. Strikes were settled also at a construction project near Frankfort, Ky., and at the Meredith Publishing Co., in Des Moines, Iowa.

Predicts C. I. O. Expulsion.

Gulfport, Miss., March 26 (U.P.).—Holt Ross, self-asserted spokesman for William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, tonight told labor leaders here that if John L. Lewis' C. I. O. unions "continue to defy" the A. F. of L., the parent organization would be forced to expel the rebels.

Italy Masses Troops for Use If Rebels Lose

reinforced insurgents were driven back five miles from the important garrison, key to valuable mercury mines, and that 10,000 Italian soldiers were among those put to rout.

Meanwhile, the cabinet of the autonomous state of Catalonia headed by Premier Jose Tarraddellas resigned at Barcelona. President Luis Companys said names of a new cabinet would be announced Monday or Tuesday "at the earliest." Reasons for the resignation were not given.

Planes Aid Drive.

War planes and artillery paved the way for repeated government infantry attacks in the drive on Pozoblanco. Pilots recounted the destruction of a 30-car insurgent troop train and part of a cavalry troop in bombardment of the area.

Described as a "second Guadalajara"—(in that northern sector the government last week drove back insurgents to a point some 50 miles from Madrid)—the offensive from Pozoblanco was launched in an effort to recapture Alcaracejos.

Government seizure of Alcaracejos, it was believed, would remove all danger to Pozoblanco.

Heavy pressure was brought against the Mediterranean Coast town of Motril today also, as government troops sought to push Gen. Francisco Franco's men back toward Malaga.

Government war planes today descended upon Guadalajara insurgent positions. Air scouts said 30,000 Italian soldiers had been withdrawn from this front.

(Valencia, speculating that the Italians would be transferred elsewhere, said the troops were withdrawn from Guadalajara fighting because of dissension among themselves and inferred belief some had been shot in the back—presumably by comrades.)

"Stern Measures" Refused.

By the United Press.

London, March 26.—Great Britain, turning deaf ears to an angry demand from the Spanish Loyalist government for "stern measures" against Italy, appeared tonight to have lessened Europe's worst war scare since World War days.

British statesmen, taking advantage of the Easter holiday lull in diplomatic exchanges, brought their time-proven policy of delay and caution into play to soothe the tempers of European powers—split into Communist—Fascist blocs by Premier Mussolini's refusal to withdraw any Italian volunteers from the Spanish battlefronts.

Duce "Cleared" by Britain.

Spokesmen of the foreign office virtually gave Il Duce a "clean bill" against charges—from the Loyalists, Russia and France that he has been sending men to Spain to fight with the rebel armies since the international volunteers embargo went into effect February 20.

The averting of a grave crisis and perhaps an approach to a general European war was attributed to:

1. British refusal to consider the Loyalist demand that Italy be held guilty of an indirect act of war and be held "unfit" to participate in the international nonintervention scheme, particularly the air and naval control of Spanish frontiers.

2. Insistence by Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin and Foreign Minister Anthony Eden that every diplomatic means must be used to lessen Italo-British tension, which is crammed with grave possibilities in the Mediterranean.

Reich Keeps Aloof.

3. Germany's refusal, despite fresh charges against her from the Loyalist government at Valencia, to involve herself in the international squabble over Spain—a refusal said by diplomats to be based on her desire to retain amicable relations with Great Britain.

4. France's apparent hope that Chancellor Adolf Hitler might, despite his close co-operation with Mussolini, respond to Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos' appeal and intercede with Il Duce.

5. Authoritative information that France will appeal directly to the League of Nations for action against Italy only as a last resort. Mussolini's spokesmen warned last night that any attempt by France to bring League reprisals against Italy would have Europe "on the precipice of war."

Il Duce Sees Nazi Envoy.

Rome, March 26 (AP).—Ambassador Ulrich von Hassel, just back from Berlin, was received by Premier Mussolini tonight and authoritative quarters indicated he had communicated Reichsfuehrer Hitler's views on the Spanish situation to the Italian leader.

Politics and People

President Appears to Be Playing Into Hands of Foes in Many Court Plan Statements.

By Franklyn Waltman

INEXPLICABLE to many persons are some of the arguments and actions pursued by President Roosevelt in behalf of his Supreme Court reorganization program. Why the President should so easily play into the hands of foes of his program by making statements easily disproved has perplexed some of his most ardent supporters, both within and outside of the Administration.

WALTMAN.

For instance, why did Mr. Roosevelt in his message to Congress proposing the Supreme Court plan undertake to justify it almost solely on the ground that it was necessary to relieve serious congestion in Federal Court dockets when the reports of his Attorney General and his Solicitor General, made to Congress only a month previously, contained a sweeping refutation that such congestion existed?

Indeed, there is curiosity as to why the President ever projected the docket-congestion and advanced-age arguments at all since his real concern was to get rid of or offset members of the Supreme Court who withheld their approval, for one reason or another, from what he was trying to do, irrespective of their age. In the end he had to concede this was his purpose and it is a mystery why he did not adopt the head-on, frontal attack from the beginning.

Most amazing of all developments in this controversy, however, is that the President should give to the country a practical demonstration of the reasonableness of contentions projected against the Court plan by its foes—contentions which have been ridiculed and denied by proponents of the plan.

For six weeks now the President's foes in this fight have contended that it is his purpose not to place what he terms enlightened justices on the Supreme Court but to put there men who are subservient to his will. It has been intimated that there would be extracted in advance from the President's new appointees promises, either implied or expressed, to approve New Deal legislation in toto.

Such was the implication in the words of President Dodds, of Princeton University, when he declared that Mr. Roosevelt had "invented a scheme by which he hopes to control the opinions of the court."

"Stripped of excess verbiage," said the Princeton head, "this is what the proposal amounts to. While the undated resignations of the new appointees may not be demanded and filed in advance, the result will amount to the same thing, and Americans always have deplored appointment to any office, judicial or otherwise, under such conditions."

Proponents of the President's plan have replied that such contentions are preposterous—that it is an insult to the President to suggest that he would name the type of men who would give such a promise and that it is an aspersion on the honor of the Senate to suggest that it would be a party to confirming such nominees. The vigor of the reply, voiced by Mr. Roosevelt as well as others, weakened the force of this contention against the plan.

* * * *

Then what happens? The President sends to the Senate the name of 68-year-old Judge Robert Lee Williams, of Oklahoma, to be a member of the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals. Accompanying the nomination is a copy of a letter from Judge Williams to Attorney-General Homer S. Cummings that in the event he is given this judicial promotion he will retire from the Federal bench when he reaches the age of 70 years—21 months hence.

Judge Williams' letter was not that of a man serving notice on the appointing power that already had made up his mind to retire to private life when he became 70 years old and that therefore his services were available only for 21 months more—a notice designed to discourage his appointment.

The Oklahoma jurist plainly stated that if given the circuit bench appointment he would retire at the age of 70. In other words, he made a conditional promise, for if the Senate refuses to confirm his new appointment he would be under no obligation, moral or otherwise, to retire on his seventieth birthday. The plain purpose of this letter promising to retire at a specified date was not to discourage his appointment, but to clear the way for it, due to the President's previous declarations regarding judges over 70 years old and the need for an infusion of younger blood in the Federal judiciary.

How does Judge Williams' letter differ from the "undated resignations of the new appointees" to which Dr. Dodds made reference? Of course, it could not be enforced since the Constitution still guarantees Federal judges life tenure of office—but neither could an "undated resignation" of a Supreme Court justice. What happens to the independence of the judiciary when its members bind themselves in advance, as a quid pro quo for their appointments, to relinquish the office at a specified time?

And if there can be extracted from a candidate for an appellate court appointment a promise to resign at a specified date, what is to prevent the appointing power from extracting from a prospective Supreme Court appointee a promise to resign should the appointee find he cannot subsequently agree with the Administration—or that he will agree regarding certain types of legislation?

Those whose memories are not short remember that Calvin Coolidge undertook to control the views and opinions of the Federal Tariff Commission by making the price of reappointment for at least one—Representative David J. Lewis of Maryland—the submission of an undated resignation. And also clear in memory is President Roosevelt's removal of William E. Humphreys from the Federal Trade Commission—not because of misbehavior or malfeasance—but because Mr. Humphreys' views did not harmonize with those which Mr. Roosevelt held. The Supreme Court held the Humphreys removal illegal, but he had died in the meantime.

The Federal Trade and Tariff commissions are quasi-judicial bodies and it is a great distance to jump from tampering with the independence of these agencies to tampering with the independence of the Federal courts. The Williams appointment illustrates the potentialities of where we are going better than tens of thousands of words from the President's opponents.

The curious thing is that Mr. Roosevelt so blithely should supply his opposition with such an illustration. Can it be that somewhere in the Administration there is a Prince Machiavelli?

Black to Fight Two Nominees On Ship Board

War on Wiley and Land Provides New Problem for President.

Notice of a last-ditch fight by Senator Hugo L. Black (Democrat), of Alabama, on confirmation of two of President Roosevelt's nominees to the new permanent Maritime Commission last night added another problem to those faced by the President on his return today from his Georgia vacation.

Senator Black, because of his opposition to Admirals Henry A. Wiley and Emory S. Land, on Thursday blocked confirmation of the five appointees to the important new merchant marine subsidy body, and caused the names to be returned to the Commerce Committee which had unanimously indorsed the five. Black said he would insist on hearings being held.

In addition to Wiley and Land, those named to the commission were Joseph P. Kennedy, financier and former chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission; former Representative C. M. Moran, of Maine, and Thomas M. Woodward, consumer counsel for the Bituminous Coal Commission.

A reported suggestion that the controversy could be solved by Admiral Wiley's agreeing to resign shortly after confirmation was said to have resulted in the President being advised that Senate friends of the admiral would not consent to such a "trade." Later, it was said, word came from the President's Warm Springs vacation headquarters that he would not withdraw any of the names submitted.

Admiral Wiley is now serving as chairman of the temporary three-man commission named last fall to serve until a permanent group could be selected. While Senator Black's opposition to him is based ostensibly on his attitude toward labor, it was learned that the Senator had been in conflict with some activities of the temporary commission almost since its induction into office.

Protests to White House.

The Alabaman is said to have protested to the White House against the temporary commission's taking up work that he understood was to have been left to the permanent board. It was said he implied an understanding on his part that he and other Senators were to be consulted in selection of the permanent group. Otherwise, he is said to have implied, opposition to the merchant marine act, which created the commission, might have been so great as to block its passage.

Greater opposition on his part, however, was reported to have been aroused by the commission removing or transferring personnel of the old Shipping Board, replaced by the commission, who had been of help to the Senator in his work as chairman of the Senate committee investigating ocean mail contracts. Disclosures by Black's committee and by a similar investigation by the Postoffice Department were largely responsible for passage of the merchant marine act, which does away with the foreign mail contracts.

Admirals Questioned.

Transfer of Otto Praeger, W. H. McDaniel and L. D. Staver, who had assisted the Black investigation, to relatively unimportant posts was said to have been charged by Black, while W. H. Peacock, who had been under fire in the inquiry, was said to have been given a better assignment. Admiral Wiley is said to have informed the White House that the Senator's charges were groundless. Praeger and Peacock later resigned.

Both Land and Wiley, it was learned, were questioned last week when they appeared before the Commerce Committee. It was said testimony by Admiral Land at a Senate hearing, regarding cost of a naval vessel, had aroused antagonism of Senator Gerald P. Nye, chairman of the Senate Munitions Committee. However, Senator Nye said last night his opposition had been largely dissipated by the admiral's explanations before the Commerce Committee.

Ky. Court Asks Broader View Of Constitution

By the Associated Press.

Frankfort, Ky., March 26.—Stating "the ox wagon age has passed and forever gone," Kentucky's court of appeals, highest tribunal of the Commonwealth, called for a broader interpretation of the Federal and State constitutions in an opinion handed down today.

The opinion, given in a test case in which the validity of a tax of cosmetics was upheld, was written by Judge Virgil Baird, of Glasgow, youngest member of the court in point of service, but one of the oldest in actual years. Judge Baird is 74 years old. He was appointed to the court recently to fill a vacancy.

The opinion was concurred in by four of the seven members of the court. Two members dissented.

"In this age, when changes and advancements come almost over night in commercial activities and industrial advancements," Judge Baird wrote for the court, "the court must not cripple or throw a barrier in the way of the legislative department of our Government in making laws imposing taxes to meet the necessary demand of government, if it can be avoided.

"While we must not overlook the basic principles contained in the Federal and State constitutions, still the meaning of words, or even of whole sentences, used in legislative enactments, must not be contracted and limited, as to bring a law in opposition to the Federal or State constitution, especially as it affects taxation, if it can be avoided."

The courts and officers of the court, the judge continued, "must remember that oftentimes by our training, education and surroundings, we find ourselves in the narrow channels herein referred to and unconsciously we declare and adjudge acts of the legislature to be in opposition and in conflict to some parts of the State or Federal constitution, when if viewed with a broad and forward outlook, it would not be the case.

Asylum Employe Beats Fellow Worker to Death

Philadelphia, March 26 (AP).—Detective John Hanlon said a man who described himself as James McCullen, 41, an employe at the Pennsylvania Institute for Mental Diseases, walked into detective headquarters late today and said he had killed George Burroughs, 68, a fellow-employe, with a crowbar.

Burroughs' body was found in McCullen's room at the institution at about the same time the man reached City Hall. Hanlon said the man told him the killing occurred seven hours earlier. The detective quoted him as saying he called Burroughs into his room, gave him a drink and beat him with the bar "so he would go to Heaven."

75th Congress Wheezes Along At Snail's Pace

Session Has Accomplished Less Thus Far Than 'Lame Ducks' Did.

By the United Press.

The 81-day-old Seventy-fifth Congress—streamlined to cope with modern legislative needs—is wheezing along at a far slower pace than any of its "lame duck" predecessors of recent years, a survey showed last night.

No new major legislation has been enacted yet and none is in prospect in the near future. The number of Senators who fail to answer quorum calls because they are detained "on important business" has grown with the arrival of spring weather. Congressmen don't have to explain their absence.

Both houses began work with a vim in January and quickly whirled to passage a series of President Roosevelt's "should" (he doesn't like the word "must" applied in this manner) bills. They extended the reciprocal trade treaty act, the life of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the dollar devaluation authority and the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund.

Then began the rest period that has continued with few interruptions until yesterday—when both houses were in recess until Monday.

Have Produced Little.

There are few committees meeting, and those that have met have produced little or nothing in the way of legislation that Mr. Roosevelt had indicated he wants at this session. Part of this inactivity is traceable to the Administration itself.

For example, the Chief Executive asked for a legislative program to aid farm tenants. Government officials can't agree on the method to be followed and the plan is bogged down in the House Agriculture Committee. Also, Mr. Roosevelt insisted in his budget message that the so-called "nuisance" taxes, which yield $500,000,000 a year, be extended.

The House Ways and Means Committee hasn't done anything about it because Treasury officials, concerned about indications that income tax returns will be $100,000,000 below their estimates, suggested that action on any taxes be deferred temporarily.

Marking Time.

The President has indicated he will send to Congress an outline of legislation which he feels is essential to obtain the social objectives of the invalidated NRA, including maximum hours and minimum wages. The House Labor Committee is marking time on other minor bills until the Chief Executive finishes his program.

Only three appropriation bills have been approved by both houses and only one has gone to conference. None has gone to the White House for the President's signature. Last year at this time a lame-duck Congress had passed six appropriation bills of which two had been signed by Mr. Roosevelt and two were in conference.

In the interim, the last lame-duck Congress had passed the soldier bonus bill, the neutrality bill and the soil conservation act to replace the invalidated AAA.

Whistler Etching Stolen At College, Abandoned

Corvallis, Ore., March 26 (AP).—An original Whistler etching, stolen from Oregon State College, was recovered today on the campus where it had been abandoned by the thief.

J. Leo Fairbanks, head of the college art department, expressed belief the thief realized he would be unable to dispose of the etching. The work was entitled the "Little Nude Figure" and was part of a collection of more than 100 etchings and lithographs of Lessing J. Rosenwald, English collector. The thief had cut it from an open frame. It was brought here in a traveling art exhibit.

Noted Sculptor's Widow Dies at New York Home

New York, March 26 (AP).—Mrs. Anne Meredith Kitson, widow of Samuel J. Kitson, English sculptor and recipient of the Pope's gold medal for art prior to his death in 1906, died yesterday after a brief illness. She was 82.

A native of Waltham, Mass., she had lived the latter years of her life surrounded with mementoes of her friendships with Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, Louisa May Alcott, Edwin Booth, Grover Cleveland, Benjamin Harrison, William McKinley and others.

3 Children See Father Kill Mother, Shoot Self

Canton, Ohio, March 26 (AP).—Three children looked on late today while their mother was shot to death and their father probably fatally wounded in a quarrel climaxing domestic difficulties.

Police said that James Monticue, 36, shot his wife through the heart, then fired a bullet into his own head when Mrs. Monticue refused to patch up a recent estrangement. Monticue was taken to a hospital in critical condition. Police said that the couple's three children, Leora, 12; Shirley, 7, and Gloria, 2, witnessed the shooting. Leora, police said, tried to grab her father's arm but he eluded her.

Nazis Boycott Good Friday's Mass in Rome

Vatican Fears Envoys Will Snub Easter Services; Duce Seeks Peace.

By the United Press.

Vatican City, March 26.—German diplomats to the Holy See, emphasizing German anger had not yet cooled over Pope Pius XI's recent encyclical denouncing Nazi church policy, "snubbed" Good Friday mass held in the Sistine Chapel today.

The delegation yesterday boycotted Holy Thursday mass, further straining relations between Germany and the Vatican. When the envoys failed to attend mass today, reports were strengthened that they would boycott Easter mass when Pope Pius makes his first public appearance since his illness.

Good Friday mass was celebrated by Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli in the presence of 19 other cardinals, members of the papal court, clergy, diplomats from other nations, the governor of Vatican City, the Pope's relatives and aristocracy.

500 Churches Hold Services.

Simultaneously in 500 other churches in Rome and throughout the nation, the saddest day of the Holy Week which commemorates Christ's death on the Cross was observed in solemn ceremony.

The Pope, feeling stronger than since he was bedridden early in December, prepared to attend Easter mass Sunday when he will offer benediction to the crowds expected in St. Peter's Cathedral. He gave private audiences to Mgr. d'Avak, administrator of the Basilica, and Santa Maria Maggiore and Signora Barelli, of the Catholic Action organization.

While Good Friday ceremonies were in progress, a prelate said he did not believe the Vatican-Nazi dispute would reach the breaking point.

Duce Seeks Peace.

Premier Mussolini was using his influence with Berlin to prevent a rupture between the Church and Germany, pointing to Italy's peaceful and profitable co-operation with the Church.

Pope Pius tomorrow will issue his third encyclical in ten days. It will deal with the Mexican church situation and is expected to condemn various government policies allegedly calculated to impair religious freedom. Some persons believed the Pope again might refer to the German problem.

Dewey Prepares For New Attack

New York, March 26 (AP).—Victorious in his first major engagement with industrial racketeering, Special Prosecutor Thomas E. Dewey tonight stepped back for another clout at organized crime.

The conviction of seven men accused of extorting $2,000,000 a year from restaurant operators, which came last night after a ten-week trial, was hailed by Dewey as a clincher to his argument that "racketeering can be crushed."

Among the pending prosecutions known to be in various stages of development were those of the $50,000,000-a-year policy racket, described by Dewey's aides as the source of the biggest slush fund for organized crime in the country; the alleged strong-arm methods used in enforcing a $10,000,000-a-year racket in the electrical contracting industry; the levying of cartage tribute against bakers, and a lucrative, unlawful traffic in used bricks.

2 Airlines Cut Fares From D. C. to Pacific

Reduction in airline fares between Washington and the West Coast were announced yesterday by United Air Lines and American Air Lines. The reductions will be effective May 1.

Millions to View Easter Services in National Parks

By the Associated Press.

The National Park Service estimated yesterday millions of Americans will see Easter services in parks and monument areas, or hear descriptions sent over the radio.

Yosemite National Park in California will have the latest sunrise service. It will be nearly 10 before the sun appears above the great bulk of Half Dome, at the entrance to Yosemite Valley. A small promontory in Mirror Lake will be the pulpit.

In Arizona, on the brink of the Grand Canyon, sunrise will come at 6:22 a. m. and the Eastern observance will begin. Another spectacular ceremony will be broadcast from the summit of the Ouachita Mountains in Arkansas. Other services will be held in Acadia National Park, Me.; Death Valley National Monument, California; White Sands National Monument, New Mexico, and Zion National Park, Utah.

Treasury Plans Silver Cache Near Academy at West Point

$900,000,000 to Be Stored in New Depository; Machine Gunners to Guard Building of Steel-Reinforced Concrete.

By the Associated Press.

The Treasury, seeking greater protection for its silver hoard, disclosed yesterday it intends to construct a squat steel and concrete depository near the West Point, N. Y., Military Academy.

With more than $1,000,000,000 of gold already transferred to the new gold depository near the Fort Knox, Ky., military reservation, officials said bids on the $600,000 strongbox for silver probably will be asked in the next few weeks.

Although a specific site at West Point has not been finally selected, officials said this probably will be done shortly. Under present plans, the flat-roofed depository will be situated in the center of a four-acre tract surrounded by a high steel fence.

It will hold 2,000,000,000 ounces of silver, or about 70 tons. This is about $900,000,000 worth at current rates, and is approximately double the Treasury's present holdings.

The building, made of steel-reinforced concrete, will have space for office workers, regular guards and a force of machine gunners. The latter will be stationed in concealed niches in the wall.

Assayers' and other offices will be in the front of the one-story building, which will measure 150 by 250 feet. The Fort Knox depository is only 105 by 121 feet.

In the silver depository, between 16 and 20 steel vaults will be situated in the rear. The only entry to these will be through a heavy steel door.

Shops Bombed In Anti-Jewish Riots in Poland

By the Associated Press.

Warsaw, Poland, March 26.—A wave of anti-Semitic agitation, accompanied by bombings that caused considerable damage, swept over strike-beset Poland today.

The strikers—approximately 100,000—generally demanded higher wages to meet rapidly rising living costs. In many cases the walkouts were directed against Jewish employers.

An incendiary bomb was hurled at a Jewish shop at Poznan. Furs valued at $30,000 were destroyed. A passerby was injured when a Jewish textile shop was bombed at Grudziadz.

In Warsaw Jewish shop signs were smeared by anti-Semites. Sitdowners, who took over a metal factory here in February, continued to hold their posts, while the city's newest coffee houses remained in the hands of strikers who have occupied them for a week.

Widespread Jewish boycotts hampered trade and brought protests from Jewish business men. They cited instances in various towns, including Katowice, where trading licenses have been refused Jews.

Hundreds of strikes were under way in the nation, with trouble impending in the textile mills of the Bialystok district. Workers there demand a 30 per cent increase in wages.

Clothing manufacturers and canning establishments felt the effects of the strike wave, but heavy industries were relatively free of walkouts.

The government stepped into the picture to forbid by decree any unwarranted price advances. The ministry of the interior warned business men of severe punishment for industries taking advantage of the situation to boost prices.

Col. Green's Part In Politics Bared

Dallas, March 26 (AP).—Gray-thatched William Madison (Gooseneck) McDonald, 70-year-old colored politician and banker, drawled from a witness stand yesterday the story of why Col. E. H. R. Green took his fortune into politics as a Republican leader in Texas.

"Back in 1896," stated McDonald, "Col. Green walked into a Republican State Committee meeting at Terrill and announced he wanted to be a delegate to the national convention. He told us his mother, Hetty Green, had told him he had all the money he needed and he should go out and get some publicity."

the operator told me I should learn something about radio, just in case I found myself on a ship sometime where the operator was sick or disabled. It took me six months to learn what I know about it. Well, we didn't have any operator on the Bjerkli."

The Bjerkli left Norfolk, Va., for Denmark March 27. Last Saturday a gale and sleet storm enveloped her. Monday a huge sea came aboard over her stern and swept the freighter's entire length, leaving a deck strewn with wreckage.

The cover of No. 2 hatch was smashed in and the sea poured into the Bjerkli.

"The saloon and cabins were flooded," said Capt. Sverdrup, "and we sprang a leak in the engine room. Our cargo of oil cakes clogged the pumps and made them useless. It was all hands on deck and no one got any sleep from Monday to Wednesday."

Praises Crew.

Capt. Sverdrup praised his crew, who, he said labored buried in water while they tried to close the broken hatch.

"Something was happening every minute," he said, "always something breaking loose. We pumped oil overboard, but that only helped a little."

When the Chelan arrived, she circled the Bjerkli and laid down an oil slick which prevented the seas from breaking, but did not lessen their height. Then the freighter put over two boats—nine men in one and seven in the other—and the crew rowed to the Chelan. A cargo net had been hung over the cutter's side and up this the rescued seamen climbed.

D. C. to Obtain 100 Drawings From Antarctic

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, March 26.—The public is about to get its first glimpse of the Paige pastels from the second Byrd Antarctic Expedition, depicting the awesome wonders of the South Polar sky.

The 100 chalk drawings will go on exhibition for 16 days at Los Angeles County Museum next Thursday.

The collection is the only one of its kind in American art. Because of this and its scientific interest it is valued at $200,000. It may go within a few weeks to the Paris Exposition. Eventually it will become a permanent exhibit at the Smithsonian Institution, Washington.

Young David Abbey Paige gave the Associated Press a special "preview" of his work today—work he did in temperatures as low as 30 and 40 degrees below zero.

"There is more color in the supposedly drab Antarctic," he declared, "than anywhere else in the world—even the tropics. I will show you."

One of his prize drawings depicted the longest Aurora Australis storm ever witnessed, a continuous display lasting 36 hours. To bring this magnificent spectacle back to civilization, Paige sketched ceaselessly during the entire time the phenomenon, little understood by science, hurled its spectral hues across the horizon.

He made nearly 300 pencil sketches covering the entire celestial sphere as the storm advanced and thus was able to depict, in whole, something no photographer could.

The Aurora Australis is the South Polar counterpart of the northern Aurora Borealis.

JUDGE ROBERT LEE WILLIAMS.

Court Plan Foes Seek to Speed An Amendment

the written promise to retire in two years, is subject to Senate confirmation.

Assailing the appointment, Senator Burke said he did not "like the idea of appointment or promotion of a judge who concedes he is so near the age of senility that he is willing to quit in two years."

Letter "Raises Question."

"I disapprove of the letter entirely," said Burke. "Any judge who would write the kind of a letter Williams did raises a question as to his qualifications. If he is so near the end of his usefulness, he'd better be left where he is."

After three weeks of hearings on the court plan, Burke estimated the sentiment in the Senate Judiciary Committee is still about evenly divided—9 to 9. He said he is going to insist finally on a "straight up-and-down vote" on the President's plan as it is.

Burke predicted the final vote, on completion of hearings, would be "nearer 11 to 7" against the plan, dependent on how Senators O'Mahoney and Pat McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, vote on the showdown. If the final vote is 9 to 9, he said he will not oppose reporting the bill to the Senate.

"I do not expect a compromise," Burke said. "When the President sends a bill to Congress, we should vote it up or down."

As a surprise development yesterday came announcement by Senator Lewis B. Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington, that he will offer a resolution on Monday calling on the Supreme Court to revise its rules to give Congress advisory opinions on legislation adopted or pending.

Schwellenbach said Chief Justice Hughes' letter to Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, suggesting that divisions within the court to hear cases is contrary to the Constitution, "is clearly an advisory opinion on a matter which has never even formally been presented to Congress."

Cites Delays in Litigation.

The Schwellenbach resolution would ask the Supreme Court for advisory opinions, "when in the opinion of a majority of Congress it is justified by the importance of legislation."

"This action," said Schwellenbach, "is prompted by the necessity for advisory opinions resulting from the multitude of litigation which has been instituted in the last few years and the injustices which have occurred by reason of delays due to such litigation."

As the quest for a court plan agreement continued, Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, started drafting two amendments to the President's bill. One would limit the President to appointment of only one additional judge in any one year, spreading four additional judgeships over the remainder of his administration. His second amendment would make the court flexible in size, in line with suggestions in the President's message.

Would Fix Size of Court.

Senator Connally's proposed constitutional amendment to force judges to retire at 75 would provide a fixed number of Supreme Court judges, a number that could not be changed by any act of Congress, such as the President proposes.

Connally thinks this is one of the strongest arguments for his plan. The Texan points out that James Bryce in his book on the "American Commonwealth" written a half-century ago, said:

"One thing only was either forgotten or deemed undesirable, because highly inconvenient, to determine * * * the number of judges in the Supreme Court. Here was a weak point, a joint in the court's armour through which a weapon might some day penetrate * * *."

Dean Smith's Proposal.

Similar to the Connally plan for retirement at 75 was a recommendation made by Dean Young B. Smith, of the law faculty of Columbia University, before the Senate committee Thursday. Smith recommended an accompanying limitation —that retirement shall not become effective until a successor qualifies. Connally said his amendment will contain no such limitation. He said a President could use it as a loophole to keep certain judges indefinitely on the bench.

Suggestion that Congress might hasten amendment action by providing for the date and setup of State conventions to act speedily on constitutional amendments started Senators on a new study of the Constitution to determin legality of the method. Both O'Mahoney and Burke declared at once it was constitutional.

Used for Repeal.

The convention method of ratification was used for the first time in repealing the prohibition amendment, but in that case the matter of calling the conventions was left entirely to the States. The amendment was ratified and became effective in less than ten months.

Under the new proposal, which it is claimed would obtain even more rapid action, Congress would take the initiative, providing for the election of delegates to State conventions on a specified date, and a uniform date for the conventions to meet. Election expenses would be paid by the Federal Government, and other matters in connection with nomination and election of delegates would be left to the States.

Rep. Amlie Backs Change.

An appeal for liberal support of the President's court plan was made on the radio last night by Representative Thomas R. Amlie (Progressive), Wisconsin. He said that with "one or two exceptions" proposed constitutional amendments "are not as fundamental as the President's court plan." He assailed advocacy of an amendment by "the reactionary press."

In the Government publication, "Indians at Work," John Collier, Commissioner of Indian Affairs, said it was in the interest of Indian court cases that the court plan be approved. Collier said the court as now made up "could not meet its responsibility if every justice among the nine were a Solomon of wisdom and a Napoleon of execution."

Union Schism Is Chief Issue Of Socialists

Convention May Take Sides; Debates Indorsement of C. I. O. Today.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 26.—The split between the American Federation of Labor and John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization emerged tonight as a prime issue before the Socialist Party's special convention which opened today.

The question of a convention indorsement for the C. I. O. was not scheduled to be debated until tomorrow, but Carl Minkley, chairman of the strong Wisconsin delegation, declared firm opposition to the party taking sides at all.

Previously the Socialist executive committee approved "in principle" the C. I. O. plan of industrial unionism. Roy E. Burt, executive secretary, said this action "undoubtedly" will come before the convention.

"A majority of the Wisconsin delegation believes it would be ill-advised to bring this fight into the convention," declared Minkley, party secretary in his State. "The Socialist Party is pledged to support all organized workers."

The Wisconsin Socialist organization is a unit of that State's Farmer-Labor Progressive Federation which includes A. F. of L. leaders.

Today's sessions were closed, but a press release said the party stand on war and fascism were discussed and that formal action was deferred until Sunday.

An earlier release said Norman Thomas, thrice Socialist Presidential candidate, had been "thus far" unable to obtain a passport visa for a proposed trip to Russia. In Washington, however, the Russian Embassy announced the visa was granted. Hearing of this, Thomas said:

"I am glad to know it has been granted. I thought that it would be."

He said he and Mrs. Thomas planned to leave March 31 and to visit England and France also on what he described as a visit "to study conditions in Europe."

Hawaii Appeal To Become 49th State Renewed

Even Tiny Guam Joins Territories Seeking Changed Status.

By the Associated Press.

Virtually all of Uncle Sam's territories and possessions are astir with pleas for changes in political status.

Hawaii, citing its long record of self-support, has renewed its request for advancement from a Territory to the forty-ninth State.

Rival factions of crowded Puerto Rico, dissatisfied with present relations with the Federal Government, have asked Congress for both Statehood and independence.

Little Guam, lonely outpost in the Pacific, all but surrounded by Japanese islands, recently sent a delegation here to seek American citizenship for its 20,000 inhabitants. It won support of chairmen of Senate and House Insular Affairs committees.

Trade Pact Urged.

President Manuel L. Quezon, of the Philippines, urged here last week that the date for final independence of the islands be moved forward from 1946 to 1938 or 1939. He talked with State Department officials, too, about a reciprocal trade agreement between the United States and the islands after that time.

Only Alaska and the Virgin Islands appear politically quiet. Congress last year gave the Virgin Islands a government somewhat like Alaska's.

Independence Bill Fails.

Echoes from overseas America are faint, however, in the capital. Congress in past sessions has been inclined to pay little heed to requests for governmental changes.

Hawaii's statehood bill got only as far as the House Territories Committee at the last session.

A Puerto Rican statehood proposal led to a hearing in 1935 which resulted in a stalemate between advocates of closer ties with the Federal Government and those favoring no ties at all. An independence bill failed last year to gain that much consideration.

A commission visited American Samoa in 1931 and returned with a recommendation that citizenship be granted the natives, but repeatedly the House has failed to join the Senate in voting approval.

Georgian Arrested Twice on 'Bender'

A two-day "bender" which lasted through a night in a police cell and an appearance in Police Court ended with a $25 fine or 25 days in jail for James B. Carter, of Georgia, yesterday.

Carter was released on his personal bond Thursday when arraigned before Judge Isaac R. Hitt. Judge Hitt instructed him to leave Washington immediately. Yesterday Carter's name again was called in Police Court on an intoxication charge. It seems Carter got no further than a Pennsylyania avenue bus terminal before he was arrested again

"Your honor," Carter explained, "this is not another offense, but a continuation of the first." Judge Hitt sentenced the man to pay the fine or go to jail.

Report Is Filed On School Blast

Austin, Tex. March 26 (AP).—A military court of inquiry reported preliminary findings today on the London Community School explosion which killed 455 March 18.

National Guard officers who composed the court recommended to Gov. James V. Allred that a State agency be created to supervise erection of public buildings, that the agency have power to enforce protective regulations and that use of malodorants to make escaping gas noticeable be required.

The court held that the explosion resulted from accumulation of gas in the foundation area between the ground and the first floor of the building and probably was ignited by a spark from a "knife switch" on an electric line in an adjacent room.

D. C. Meat-Cutter Kills Self by Gas

Harry C. Allder, 59, 4121 Fourth street northwest, was found dead in the basement of his home yesterday, with two jets on a gas range open, by his wife, Mrs. Marjorie Allder.

According to police, Allder, a meat cutter, was on an ironing board with his face over the burners. Efforts of the fire rescue squad to revive him were futile, and he was pronounced dead by an Emergency Hospital doctor.

Members of the family said Allder had been in ill-health for several months and had not worked since November. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide.

$6,520 Found on Farm Of Starving Woman, 90

Burwell, Neb., March 26 (AP).—Police today found $6,520 hidden on the 1,041-acre farm of Mrs. Emma Whitesell, 90, for whom a guardian was appointed after a physician reported she was endangering her health by starvation. The physician said her diet consisted of apples, grown on the farm, and bread.

entered McCracken's body. He was carried to the Alturas Hospital, where Mrs. McCracken, on regular duty, was assigned to his case.

McCracken's last act was to dictate a dispatch to the Associated Press in San Francisco. It said:

"Tonight about 6:30 Harry French shot Claude L. McCracken, editor of the Modoc Mail, with an automatic pistol. Condition of McCracken serious. (Signed) McCracken."

McCracken died as his wife, with a steady hand, assisted physicians who probed for the bullets.

Deputy Sheriff George Kelly, who took French into custody, said French admitted the shooting but gave no reason for it.

Dental Clinic Need Stressed At Alexandria

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523

Dr. William Lewis Schafer, city health officer, spoke to representatives of 13 social agencies and charitable organizations at the Alexandria Boys Club Thursday, when he stressed the immediate health needs of the city.

The occasion was a meeting of the Council of Social Agencies, and one of the needs of the indigent of which Dr. Schafer spoke was dental attention. Many children of indigent parents, he said, are badly handicapped for lack of dental attention, and unless the condition is corrected the results may become serious. Some plan, he said, should be adopted whereby free dental clinics might be held.

The meeting was opened by W. Travis Wilson, chairman of the council, who summed up the history and aims of the newly formed organization.

Dr. Shafer voiced his opinion that medical care of the indigent is being adequately handled, through the efforts of the physicians of the city, the Alexandria Hospital, Red Cross and other agencies. A dental clinic, however, he said, is needed, and there are at present no funds available to provide this necessary service. He urged that the matter be studied and some definite action taken by the council.

To Observe Passover.

Agudas Achim Congregation last night held the first of the series of services in conjunction with the observance of the Passover, others to be at 7:30 o'clock this morning and tomorrow at 8:30 a. m. and 5 p. m. A social entertainment will be held tomorrow afternoon.

Alexandria Bethel No. 4, Job's Daughters, will pay tribute to the past leaders at a special meeting this evening at 8 o'clock in the Masonic Temple. The session has been designated as honored queen's night, and special invitations extended all members of Masonic lodges and the Order of Eastern Star.

Dr. J. R. Hobbs, of Birmingham, Ala., president of the National Antisaloon League, will speak Tuesday evening in the First Baptist Church. The meeting is under the auspices of the Virginia Antisaloon League, and is the first of a series to be held in Virginia during the year.

Mrs. Henshaw Dies.

The Epworth League of the Methodist Episcopal Church South will hold a special candlelight service tomorrow at 7 p. m. in the Sunday school room.

Mrs. Laura Smith Henshaw, widow of John G. Henshaw, died Thursday night in the Alexandria Hospital after an illness of ten days. She is survived by a son and daughter, T. Harvey Henshaw and Mrs. Marian H. Stewart.

The funeral will be held at 11 a. m. Monday at the Methodist Episcopal Church South. Burial will be in Bethel Cemetery.

Girl, 12, Recounts Forced Marriage To a Grandfather

Bradenton, Fla., March 26 (AP).—County Judge Sam J. Murphy said today a 12-year-old girl told him her father forced her into marriage last week with a man 45 years her senior.

An older sister was preparing to institute annulment proceedings, he said.

Mr. and Mrs. Lemuel E. North, the child's parents, charged their older daughter had "kidnaped" the child bride from the home of her husband, Chandler L. Revell, 57-year-old crate mill foreman and a grandfather. They told the judge they wanted the marriage to stand.

Judge Murphy said the child, Martha Nell, sixth grade student in the Manatee school, told him: "I will not go back, even if I have to run away."

The girl told him, Judge Murphy said, her father advised her nearly two weeks ago he had arranged the marriage because his job was at stake and because of favors extended by Revell.

Writer's Rites Arranged.

London, March 26 (AP).—The family of John Drinkwater decided today to forego formal funeral services for the British dramatist-actor, who died yesterday. The body will be cremated in London Tuesday and the ashes buried in a rural churchyard in Oxfordshire, where Drinkwater spent his youth.

"It was about 50 feet from the ground when I looked away."

Bohnet, of Newark; his co-pilot, Howard E. Warwick, of East Orange, N. J.; Doris C. Hammons, the hostess, of Elk City, Okla., and the ten passengers were killed instantly.

As if in farewell to her mother in Leddy, Okla., Miss Hammons had written this thought on the last page of her flight log, discovered among the debris today:

"Sadness must always be for the living. When a ship sets sail it is the eyes of those who watch from shore that are blinded with tears."

De-Icing Regulations.

The Bureau of Air Commerce is planning new regulations for airplane de-icing equipment, it was learned last night, following announcement that the Pittsburgh crash was caused by ice on the wings of the plane. Fred D. Fagg, jr., director of the bureau, declined to say whether the impending regulations would have prevented Tuesday night's crash.

The new regulations, which have been under consideration for some time, probably will deal with de-icing equipment in only generalized terms; regulations for automatic equipment, which possibly might have prevented the tragedy, probably will not be included.

Fagg added the bureau would not comment on the company's explanation of the crash. A full report on the crash, the only announcement that will be made, will not be ready until after several months of hearings and investigations.

Nun's Forehead Bleeds on 13th Crucifixion Day

Consenza, Italy, March 26 (U.P.).—Sister Elena Aiello a Catholic nun, lay on her small iron bed in Cosenza Orphanage tonight with blood streaming from her forehead, while physicians and priests marveled at the phenomenon which they said has occurred every Good Friday for 13 years.

The bleeding, they said, was like that of Christ when the crown of thorns was pressed to his brow on the day of the crucifixion that Good Friday commemorates.

Physicians said that, as on 12 other Good Fridays, they expected Sister Elena to return to normal physical condition tomorrow.

Bingham's Wife Charges Cruelty

Miami, Fla., March 26 (AP).—Mrs. Alfreda M. Bingham, seeking a divorce on grounds of mental cruelty from former Senator Hiram Bingham, of Connecticut, testified today her husband considered her incapable of discussing public affairs.

She said that since 1928 he had assumed "a superior attitude" and was "unwilling to converse with her on questions of public interest." She added he frequently refused to answer questions.

Two of their seven sons, John and Woodbridge Bingham, of Salem, Conn., supported her testimony.

Attorneys read into the record a general denial by Bingham, who is ill in Washington. No testimony was offered in his behalf.

Circuit Judge Worth W. Trammell said after the hearing he would draw no order until tomorrow.

Gas Station Operator Robbed of $115 by Pair

Detectives last night were searching for two colored men who robbed Harry Hall, 32, filling station owner, of $115 when he stopped at Sixteenth and D streets northeast.

Hall, who lives at 36 Sixteenth street northeast, told police he was on his way home with the day's receipts when the men jumped on the side of his car. One of the men struck him on the head with a pistol while the other grabbed the money. Both men fled on foot. Hall went to Gallinger Hospital for treatment of a cut on his head.

Mrs. L. H. Lisner Is Found Dead In Bed by Maid

Wife of Former Department Store Owner Victim of Heart Attack.

Mrs. Laura H. Lisner, wife of Abraham Lisner, former owner of the Palais Royal department store, died at her home yesterday of a heart attack, at the age of 75.

Mrs. Lisner was apparently in good health and had planned to play cards yesterday afternoon with her friend, Mrs. William Rodenberg. She said she was "not feeling well" yesterday morning and remained in bed. At 10:30 her maid visited her room and found her asleep. When the maid returned at 11 she was dead.

Mr. Lisner, who has been a semi-invalid for several years, was out for a drive and returned to find his wife of 50 years dead. The couple have no children, the nearest relative being a nephew, John Graham, of this city. Several great-nieces and nephews live in California.

Leon Tobriner, attorney, and Mr. Rodenberg said the funeral was tentatively planned for 10:30 a. m. Monday. Mr. Lisner sold his store shortly after the war and since has been in retirement. The home is at 1723 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

'Terrific,' 'Lousy' Head Ten Words Most Overworked

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 26.—Now come the ten "most overworked" words.

Wilfred J. Funk, who took time out from his activities as a dictionary maker, magazine editor, book publisher and poet to compile the list, not only picked the words but named classes of people he considers their "most flagrant abusers."

Your education, charm and related qualities, he thinks, can be measured inversely with the frequency with which you use his ten words. Here's the list and the folks accused of being chief offenders:

1. Okay—Children and shop girls.
2. Terrific—All persons "exposed" to Hollywood for 24 hours or more.
3. Lousy—Ditto.
4. Contact (both verb and noun)—Advertising workers
5. Definitely—Society.
6. Gal—Broadwayites.
7. Racket—Tradesmen.
8. Swell—Interior decorators.
9. Impact—Columnists and commentators.
10. Honey—Stock brokers.

Funk's interest in words led him to compile a widely published list of the ten "most beautiful" several years ago. He thought a list of the ten "most overworked" might prove worthwhile by encouraging people to avoid their use.

"Lots of other people besides those listed are overworking these words, but I have tried to name the worst offenders," he explained. "It seems like everything that's good, bad or indifferent is 'a honey' to a broker, and in Hollywood there seems to be no middle ground between 'terrific' and the antonym, 'lousy.'"

He deplored the evidence that "gal" is making "girl" obsolete in many quarters.

As for Park avenue saying "yes, definitely," "definitely so" and "definitely" at lot of other things, Funk thinks the society of this country is becoming British-minded, what with the last King's jubilee, Mrs. Simpson and the impending coronation becoming so important to them in the last few years.

"The joke is they think it's an aristocratic English word, whereas the fact is that the English charwoman or dustman (the lowliest type of house maid and the garbage collector, to you) can hardly bear to leave 'definitely' out of a sentence."

Funk's selections as the most beautiful words in the English language were dawn, hush, lullaby, murmuring, tranquil, mist, luminous, chimes, golden and melody.

Judge Challenges Vice Prosecutor

San Francisco, March 26 (AP).—Superior Judge George J. Steiger questioned District Attorney Matthew A. Brady today about a financial obligation to a bail bond operator named in a police graft investigator's report, and challenged Brady's fitness to conduct a grand jury graft inquiry.

"This is a serious mess," the judge said after his private conference with the white-haired, 300-pound prosecutor who has held office more than 20 years.

The judge said he told Brady he "had better think it over and return to see me before the grand jury meets tomorrow night." The grand jury at that time will resume hearing on charges that police collect $1,000,000 a year in graft from prostitution and gambling.

Holmes Likely To Reorganize Traffic Force

New Supervisor Will Be Given Free Hand in Running of Bureau.

First Precinct and was instrumental in improving conditions at various congested traffic centers.

Meanwhile, heedless disregard for safety rules continued on many of the city's main traffic arteries yesterday. Although the majority of District motorists showed a tendency toward law observance, the new safety patrol was led on a wild chase along Bladensburg road northeast by the driver of a Nevada car.

Passing through the city en route North, the reckless Westerner was paced at 60 miles an hour through congested traffic. He was finally stopped not far from the spot where a policeman was killed last year by a speeding driver.

At first, the Nevada driver said he "didn't realize" how fast he was traveling and agreed with Policeman George M. Patton, the safety officer, not to "dispute his word."

Criticizes Treatment.

But later, at the Twelfth Precinct, the man condemned his "unjust" treatment. It was also found he had no driver's permit, although the State of Nevada requires this by law. He was warned to secure a driver's license, but responded:

"I won't get one—how do you like that?"

A woman in the speeding car asked Patton "if all visitors are treated like this?"

"They are," Patton answered, "when they disregard all safety rules by racing through our streets at 60 miles an hour."

It was pointed out that such speed is frowned upon even on open highways.

The offending driver complained that the arrest forced him to lose time and caused him "great inconvenience."

He posted $25 collateral, apparently unmindful of the consequences had he struck another car or killed a pedestrian. Indicating that he preferred to forfeit the money rather than appear in court, the man said "someone will hear about this—it's an outrage."

On Connecticut avenue northwest, the youthful occupants of two automobiles were taken to the Eighth Precinct station after a heedless exhibition of disdain for the rights of other motorists.

The two cars were traveling abreast down the avenue. The occupants were shouting and laughing at each other as their slowly moving vehicles blocked the passage of other machines.

When Policeman Patton honked his horn behind them, one of the drivers waved his hand for him to pass. But in order to overtake the parallel cars, Patton would have been forced to drive on the wrong side of the street.

At the police station, the youths had little to say. Apparently from respectable families, they posted collateral and went their way. But with them went a warning against negligent driving from Patton.

A few minutes later, the patrol car overtook a speeding car near the same spot. Said the driver:

"I didn't intend to speed—can't I get away with it this time?"

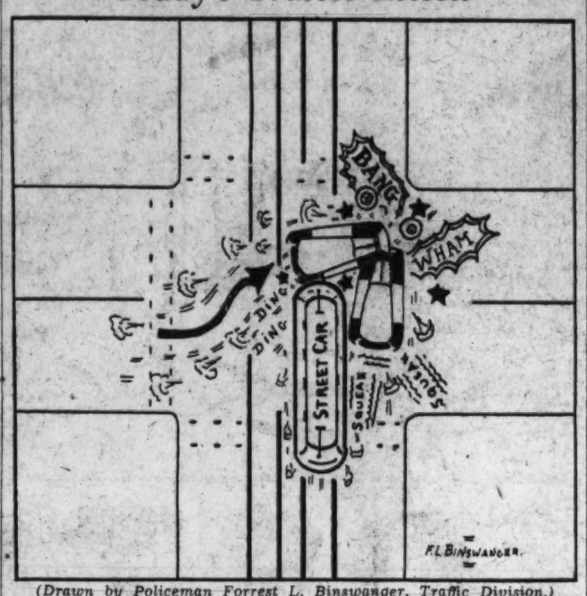
Today's Traffic Lesson



(Drawn by Policeman Forrest L. Binswanger, Traffic Division.)

Pictured are two types of drivers who long have been a menace on Washington streets—the one who attempts to "beat" other traffic across an intersection and the one who passes another vehicle at a crossing. The following safety rules are quoted from traffic regulations:

"Vehicles shall be driven on the right half of the highway, and the driver shall drive as closely as practicable to the right-hand edge or curb of the highway.

"No driver shall attempt to pass another vehicle going in the same direction at any street intersection unless the same be controlled by automatic traffic signals or a police officer."

Permits Suspended.

Permit suspensions against the following motorists, convicted of speeding, were announced yesterday by the Board of Review and Revocation of Operators' Permits:

William M. Billingly, 1724 Hobart place northwest, 30 days; Birrell W. Cuppett, Glendale, Md., 30 days; John H. Ellis, 2816 Shannon place southeast, 30 days; Charles C. James, 601 Farragut street northwest, 15 days; Gordon C. Wiseman, 111 Aspen street, Chevy Chase, Md., 30 days; Helen Beck, 5209 Wisconsin avenue northwest, 15 days.

Marion Glover, 4200 Massachusetts avenue northwest, 30 days; Edward Hatcher, 39 Quincy place northwest, revoked; Francis W. Hillearv, 2 Fowlers Hill northwest, 30 days; Joseph P. Marceron, 3622 Sherrier place northwest, 30 days; Raymond S. Pyles, 1126 Chicago street southeast, 30 days.

James E. Roberson, 2020 Claggett street northeast, 30 days; Ernest Young, 525 Third street northwest, 15 days; Marguerite P. Wilson, Cabin John, Md., 30 days, and Arthur T. Lyon, 109 West Bradley lane, Chevy Chase, Md., 30 days.

Robbers Seize $2,711; Bind Pair to Hot Pipes

New York, March 26 (AP).—Three gunmen took a $2,711.95 pay roll from messengers of the Court Press, Inc., today and escaped after tying their victims to hot steam pipes.

The messengers, Irwin Liberman and Daniel Hughes, each 22, were held up at the lobby of a building at 130 Cedar street, where the Court Press has offices on the second floor. They were backed into a dim fire well, serving as an inside fire escape, and tied with wire to steam pipes. Both suffered minor burns before Hughes worked himself free and released Liberman.

The Enemies Within.

Seven men engaged in a restaurant racket in New York City face long terms of imprisonment as the result of a verdict of guilty brought in by a supreme court jury. Three of the convicted men are officials of a trade association organized to "shake down" operators of restaurants and cafeterias. The other four are representatives of two unions of restaurant workers.

Special Prosecutor Thomas E. Dewey says it is the first time a complete industrial racket has been presented to a jury. The verdict, in his opinion, shows that racketeering can be crushed. In the present case, at any rate, a local industry has been freed from a reign of terror, and two large labor unions emancipated from the domination of conscienceless officials. Every friend of organized labor will applaud the energetic action of the law-enforcement agencies in this first major effort to protect a trade-union group against alliances with the underworld of a great city.

Lately there has been much discussion and official inquiry into the abuses of the labor-espionage systems built up by some employers. The mischief done by the hired labor spy in sowing seeds of discord and mutual suspicion is unquestionable. Yet the labor spy is not nearly so harmful to the trade-union movement as the venal official whose abuse of power and sale of privileges so often brings into disrepute the whole effort for honest collective bargaining.

The vicious type which figured in the New York restaurant racket is to be found in all parts of the country. Such individuals will find increased opportunities to ply their nefarious arts under present conditions, with business improving and labor organizations expanding rapidly. It took a great deal of time and money as well as revision of criminal laws to bring the New York malefactors before the bar of justice. Their trial and conviction sounds a timely warning to the country at large. It is that true collective bargaining has to be protected not only against reactionary employers but also against the labor racketeer.

In The Midst Of Life.

The gas explosion in Texas . . . a front tire blown out on a bus near St. Louis . . . and now another air crash outside of Pittsburgh. Death seems to have been so busy in Spain these days that it has turned over this part of the world to deputies. And they, inexpert in the work, are swinging with horribly hacking strokes.

No explanation showing criminal negligence behind the New London school tragedy has been forthcoming. As for the blowout, it also appears to have been a piece of cruel luck. Inspectors had detected no flaws in the tire and their thoroughness is indicated by the fact that bus transportation, judged on the basis of fatalities per passenger mile, is second only to the railroads in safety today. In the case of the plane, it is said that a highly unusual formation of ice on the ailerons put the craft out of control.

In all these accidents human frailty appears to have played a minor role, if any. With regard to the Pittsburgh crash in particular, this knowledge is a considerable solace. An uneasy suspicion of negligence has hung over several of the winter's six other major air accidents. Charges and countercharges of carelessness and incompetency have circulated freely in aviation circles for the past few months. They were especially evident at the recent air safety conference here.

Perhaps the new direction at the Bureau of Air Commerce can set these suspicions at rest. The Nation, eager to take to the air but with wings pinioned by doubt, earnestly hopes so.

Safety Psychology.

During the first 70 days of this year Washington averaged one traffic death every two days. Thirty-five persons were thus slaughtered up to March 11. Since then only one fatal motor accident has been recorded. In other words, the traffic fatality rate has dropped, provisionally, from one every second day to one in 15 days.

Of course, the period of improvement is too short to permit sweeping conclusions. But the coincidence of this sudden drop in the accident curve with The Post's safety campaign appears to be significant. There is unmistakable evidence that the public is driving more carefully. Last week-end, for example, the police found that the number of automobile crashes were materially reduced, in spite of the advent of spring.

It is human nature to be cautious only when one is conscious of danger or embarrassment resulting from recklessness. Since George M. Patton, the Police Department's "safety officer," and Howard F. Wentworth, The Post's safety crusader, have been cruising about the city, motorists seem to have been on their best behavior. Every one is aware of the fact that a dangerous violation of traffic rules may center the resentment of the city upon him. Pedestrians, too, are watching their step. Impressed by the fate of numerous citizens who have carelessly walked into the path of moving cars, they are more alert to the constant danger of crossing Washington's streets.

No doubt the aroused public consciousness of traffic tragedies has also stimulated the police to more energetic enforcement of the law. Constant vigilance on the part of traffic officers as well as the public seems to be the only effective deterrent to needless waste of life. It is that fact which gives special significance to every educational campaign in traffic safety, and encourages efforts of this type on a larger scale.

What Price Neutrality?

Administration leaders are taking a very curious attitude toward Senator Nye's temperate resolution, asking the Department of State to provide pertinent information on the armed intervention of other nations in the Spanish civil war. Objections to its immediate consideration, raised by Senators Robinson and Pittman, clearly indicate a desire to prevent discussion of the issue and, above all, to keep information known to be in possession of the Department of State from coming to light.

Senator Pittman, specifically, claims that "there isn't the slightest evidence" to show that the Italian government is supporting the Spanish rebels. If that is really the belief of the chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee he certainly needs all the information which the Nye resolution might be instrumental in obtaining. For State Department files are bulging with evidence, from our own diplomatic representatives in Spain and from other reliable sources, showing that the Italian government is very deeply involved in the Spanish crisis. The Senate, and the American people, have every right to know the substance of these reports.

That right is the more apparent because of the character of our neutrality legislation, both on the statue books and pending. Under the law now in operation we have declared embargoes against both sides in the Spanish civil war. Of itself that has meant effective American assistance to the Spanish rebels. In defiance of traditional international law, we have ruled that a revolt against a duly elected government is good and sufficient reason for penalizing that government.

There is already a widespread realization that as this policy is operating it is not neutrality at all, but merely disguised assistance to a Fascist rebellion. And if, on top of that, Administration spokesmen deny credibility to the abundant evidence that Italy is now openly aiding the Spanish rebels, the deep-rooted American sense of fair play will be deeply outraged.

The Post, as has often been made clear in these columns, is no believer in the efficacy or desirability of a mandatory neutrality policy. But when such a policy has been decided upon it must be vigorously and consistently applied. Otherwise it becomes not merely worthless but a shameful travesty on the national will which prompted neutrality. And that is pretty close to being the actual situation when we refuse to ship munitions to the legal Spanish government but happily ship them to Italy. Germany and Portugal to be used against the only Spanish government which we recognize.

Senator Nye merely asks the Secretary of State to advise the Senate "whether the existing neutrality laws of the United States are sufficient to provide an embargo against nations whose armed forces are engaged in active warfare in a nation where a state of civil war exists." The question is academic. Of course the existing laws are sufficient to apply an embargo against Italy tomorrow, if it is shown that her troops are fighting under governmental direction on Spanish soil. But it is desirable that Secretary Hull should say flatly that this is the case, since the mere statement might make extension of our neutrality embargoes unnecessary.

Unless effective external pressure is now brought to bear on Mussolini he is very likely to intervene in the Spanish war in a way which will seriously endanger world peace. Most effective pressure to prevent that outcome can be brought by the United States. In the Ethiopian conquest President Roosevelt did not wait for the declaration of war, which never came, before he announced that Italy was a belligerent. He does not need to wait now if the evidence of hostilities is sufficient. And none knows better than Secretary Hull that the evidence of Italian military intervention is already very close to being amply sufficient to define that country as being actually at war with Spain.

Extension of the neutrality embargoes, in the event of actual Italian intervention, is not optional for the Administration. It is mandatory. It is not a matter of whether such policy would be desirable, though this is clearly the case. A policy of ordained neutrality toward all actual belligerents has already been clearly laid down by Congress and approved by the President. If the latter refuses to apply this policy in its first real test there will certainly be no point in wasting any further time on the far more extensive neutrality legislation now tangled between the two houses of Congress.

The End And The Means.

One notable part of the testimony presented to the Senate Judiciary Committee this week is the distinction drawn between the President's general objective and his means of accomplishing it. Most of the witnesses appearing against the bill believe that some action is necessary to enable the Government to cope with modern social and economic problems. Some are convinced that the Supreme Court has taken too narrow a view of the organic law. But all denounce the remedy which the President has proposed.

Raymond Moley, former adviser of the President and frequently a severe critic of the Supreme Court, fears that this short-cut to fundamental changes would retard the "progressive evolution" now under way. It is so "destructive of the institutional consistency of this republic," he said, "that it may obstruct progressive development in the future as well." President Harold W. Dodds, of Princeton University, entered a denial "that a method which in itself is inconsistent with the good toward which it aims can accomplish an altruistic purpose."

Both these witnesses pointed to the dangers of suspending the machinery of self-government by playing upon crisis psychology. "When German democracy began issuing emergency decrees," said Dr. Dodds significantly, "it was not seeking to destroy itself, and yet that was the result . . . . The fundamental danger of succumbing to the emergency psychology is multiplied many times by the present world drift."

To these indictments has been added an analysis by Dean Smith of Columbia University's faculty of law, showing that the President's plan would not achieve its objective. More than any other point the President has emphasized the alleged need for "young blood" on the court. But if the present justices should hold their posts, six new members would be appointed to sit with them. The maximum number of justices permissible under the bill would thus be immediately attained. No new appointments could then be made, except by filling vacancies, regardless of how senile some justices might become.

If the President merely wishes to prevent aged justices from retaining their posts, Dean Smith points out, his purpose could be properly accomplished by a constitutional amendment requiring them to retire at 70 or 75. That would be a permanent remedy. Moreover, it would have the cardinal virtue of letting the people decide the issue, as is contemplated in the Constitution. By submission of the issue to conventions called by Congress in the various States a decision could be made promptly and properly.

Dean Smith suggests that "provision could be made in the amendment for retiring the present justices (beyond whatever age limit may be selected) over a period of years in the order of their seniority." Some such arrangement would be essential to prevent sudden disruption of the court's work and to avoid the appearance of trying to pack the court through a constitutional amendment.

This advice is significant, for it shows how readily the President's objective of "reinvigorating" the courts could be attained by legitimate means—if it meets with the approval of the people. When such simple and straightforward procedure is outlined it leaves upon the President the burden of proving that he did not deliberately choose a devious method because he distrusts a popular verdict.

Germany Changes Envoys.

Dr. Hans Luther, whose forthcoming retirement as German Ambassador to the United States has now been announced, has made many firm friends during his four years' stay in Washington. A man of mellow charm, delightful humor and unassuming dignity, his diplomatic career followed a long period of notable service to his country, including posts as chancellor of the German republic and head of the Reichsbank.

Dr. Luther's stay in Washington coincided with the establishment of the Nazi dictatorship, and the consolidation of its power. Certainly this did not simplify the Ambassador's task. By character and temperament unsympathetic with certain manifestations of National Socialism, it nevertheless became his duty to represent that dictatorship in a country where the great majority are definitely hostile to Hitler's philosophy of government.

It was through no lack of ability or diplomatic skill on the part of Dr. Luther that, during his four years here, German-American relations have become less friendly. If his successor, Dr. Hans Dieckhoff, ameliorates them the reason, it can be said in advance, will be found in a change in the policies of the Third Reich rather than in any shift of its envoys here.

Dr. Luther's successor is also a man of outstanding ability. A career diplomat, he learned to know America and Americans as counselor of the German Embassy here for several years. Coming fresh from the German Foreign Office he will be in a very favorable position to interpret the viewpoint of the Third Reich to the United States. He will also, by virtue of his past experience, be in a position to fulfill the even more important function of interpreting the American viewpoint to his home government.

Appreciation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On behalf of the Washington Board of Trade, we desire to extend to you, and to The Washington Post, our appreciation of your generous support of our efforts in connection with the Potomac Pollution Conference held last week, and also of the many other encouragements given this organization in its efforts to advance the development and progress of the National Capital.

We have almost 1,000 members, more than 2,000 of whom are actively attending and engaging in committee work—a situation which I believe is unique in comparison with similar organizations throughout the country. Our attendance at various gatherings called by the board last year was well over 25,000 and I feel that without question the far-seeing and public-spirited service which has been engendered in our membership would not be possible without the encouragement and support of the press, for which we are most grateful.

It may be of interest to The Post to know that in its courtesy to the Board of Trade, they are carrying out a tradition in connection with this organization started on November 25, 1889, when Beriah Wilkins, then owner of The Post, issued a call for a meeting to be held at the Ebbitt House for the purpose of organizing the Board of Trade for the City of Washington.

I know it is the sincere hope of our officers and directors that we may continue to merit this cooperation and support of the press, and the interest which The Post has taken in every movement for the welfare of Washington and its people.

Executive Secretary,

Easter Pets.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Easter season! Shouldn't it be a wondrous, happy time for all? Alas, it is not for many of our speechless animal friends, especially among small domestic pets. On the one hand, many are not wanted by their human owners, are torn from their anxious mothers and actually dumped in city alleys or country crossroads. Couldn't the owners be decent enough to send or bring them to our Animal Protective Association or the Animal Rescue League?

On the other hand, commercialism enters into the breeding of certain pets for certain seasons—pups and kittens for Christmas, with the addition of bunnies, chicks and ducklings for Easter, because attached to the latter are certain beautiful legends and Christian symbolisms of revival of life in all creation.

We would by no means deny pets to children. We rather encourage parents to prove their love for their children by making them happy with them, but to supply them not as toys, but as sensitive new little friends who, because they do not speak the human language to make known their needs, must depend upon their little masters and mistresses for their welfare. Fit the new pet to your home conditions. Don't buy rabbits, chicks and ducklings for two-room apartments. They belong in country surroundings; neither buy a St. Bernard or police pup as an indoor city pet, nor a toy fox terrier to live in an outdoor dog house.

National Humane Sunday and Be Kind to Animals Anniversary Week follow close upon Easter, April 11-17. May they find the Easter pets intelligently chosen and happy and healthy in their new homes; and surplus, unwanted creatures being cared for in an animal shelter for placing in only kind homes or for humane disposition, instead of being the victims of the brutal and most un-Christlike practice of abandoning them to homelessness and starvation.

Spain's Ideal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Ellen Burke, in her letter published in your issue of March 24, seems to be concerne lest the "Reds" win in Spain if the Fascists lose.

I should like to advise your correspondent that the Spanish people are heart and soul fighting a foreign invader, which happens to be the sinister combination of Italo-German fascism. In the face of these two real foreign invasions the Spanish political factions have put aside their isms and are fighting to a man to drive the enemy out of Spain, with the watchword engraved in their minds and hearts, "They shall not pass."

Permit me to quote the words of Fernando de los Rios, Spanish Ambassador to the United States:

The present fight in defense of democracy and liberty in Spain is not new. Rather, it is a recurrence, in a more vigorous form, of a struggle against privilege and feudalism initiated centuries ago. Moreover, in this last phase, Spain has the misfortune of facing the hostility of those who should be on her side. Their pretext being a communism which does not exist either as an aspiration or as a form of government.

The people are fighting for freedom. The same freedom from which the republic sprang, as soon as they began to experience it in a real sense. That is, as soon as they had the chance to express their thoughts; to organize their workers; and to vote in accordance with their ideals.

Everything that is good in Spain, whether at the front or in the rear, is united in a single purpose. The scientist, the artist and the worker, are showing once more that their stoic sense of life, which is a truly Spanish trait, constitutes the secret of their heroism. The Spanish people are heroic because they have an ideal, and this ideal is the one thing that gives purpose to one's existence. PETER BORRAS.

Trend Toward Radicalism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have just finished reading the very fine article written by Mr. Franklyn Waltman and I must say that I agree with him and the Brookings Institute whole-heartedly on much of the theory set forth. But it seems to me that in citing the proposals of some of the labor leaders your correspondent has not recorded them exactly in the light which these labor leaders intended. As I see it, the idea of labor is not to increase wages by trenching on profits. We are interested, of course, in mass production, and if we were able to give a job to everyone who is able and willing to work we all know that the purchasing power of this country would be increased infinitely. The capacities of all of our factories would then not begin to be sufficient to supply the demand for goods.

It seems to me that the only way we are ever going to get this "volume of production" which is the only solution to our problem, is for capital to mark time for the present, in order to get the engine started. By marking time, I mean be contented with a very, very narrow margin of profit. Of course, many economists will say that encroachment of wages upon profit will thwart expansion. To this I answer, if it is not possible for these industries to carry on until the standard of living of the masses can be raised to a decent standard of living, then the Government should subsidize these industries until the crisis has passed and all of our population are working and receiving a decent standard of living.

We have enough space in this country to build an unlimited number of factories; we have the brains to build these factories, we have an abundance of raw materials with which to supply these factories and we have the man-power to run these factories. It seems to me that we had better start doing something and stop talking about these fine spun theories of economics and money if we do not want another Fascist or Communistic regime on this planet.

The leaders are refusing to recognize the great trend in this country toward radicalism and if they do not take heed it will not be generations before it is too late.

Beautifying School Grounds.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I want to call attention to the city-wide campaign on beautifying school grounds. Now that spring is here every Parent-Teacher Association, home and school association and citizens' association should renew efforts to beautify school lawns. First, children should be warned to be careful in their play on the school playgrounds to not run on the school lawns or tramp down the hedges or shrubs or play on the terraces. Most damage is done to school grounds after school and on holidays. Also remind them not to drop paper or trash or anything on the lawns.

Each association could finance a little flower garden. This may mean the purchase of good soil and flower seed and after school hours and on Saturday this flower garden would be a fine hobby. The children should be given blossoms to take home. The varieties that produce the most blossoms should be used in these flower gardens. Many happy hours could be spent by the parents and children in beautifying their school grounds. Parents should take more pride in training them to appreciate the beautiful school grounds our school officials have worked so hard to provide for our children.

MRS. B. G. McILWEE,
Chairman, committee on beautifying school grounds.

Bartender On Overdrinking.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a recent issue Marie C. Searles wrote concerning an alleged drunken young woman being dragged from the entrance of one of Washington's hotels. In her article she inquires if the bartender of this swanky hotel continued to serve liquor freely to this young woman, when it was evident that she was disgustingly drunk. What she saw is perhaps true, yet for her to blame and cast reflections on the bartenders proves that she is not familiar with her cocktail rooms.

Bartenders abhor drunkenness. The Bartenders Union will not permit members to violate the laws of the District or laws of decency. In swanky hotels the bartender is usually as far removed from the patron, as F. D. R. is from the Supreme Court. Hotels usually have service bars in kitchens or in pantries and the bartender does not see who is served. Cocktail rooms usually have managers and head waiters whose duty it is to see that the patrons are cared for properly. Bartenders fill the orders of the waiters and are not charged with the management of the place. So for Madam Searles to blame the bartender for the alleged condition of this young lady is unreasonable and unfair.

And again assuming that what she saw is true, what proof is there that the young lady obtained too much in the swanky hotel? Perhaps she carried a bottle with her and was only a patron of the hotel to the extent of using the free lobbies and only spent the evening. Hotels and restaurants do have this trouble—customers who conduct a serve-self bar in the washrooms.

Why did Madam Searles not make an investigation or call the police?

The bartender has no more knowledge in swanky hotels who consumes his preparation than the cook has who consumes the products of his art.

Madam Searles, I think, owes to the bartenders an apology unless she can prove that the bartender knowingly served the drunken young lady. In that case our organization would be pleased to have the facts, and if we do obtain facts that warrant we will discipline the bartender, assuming of course, that he is a member, as all bartenders in swanky hotels are.

Can Spring Be Far Behind?

THE snow was a lot deeper the winter of 1918 (that was the winter we all had the flu, the Erie trains were snowbound for days and our school was closed because they couldn't keep us warm), but I remember the next winter was longer, much longer, for it was that Christmas that I got my bike. It was a beautiful bright red affair straight from Sears-Roebuck, and the great wonder to me was how they managed to get it into the house and hidden without my seeing it, for I was at that snooping age in a boy's life when every wrapped package is a torture as long as its contents remain unknown. The wheel, of course, was crated.

• • • •

I had learned to ride on my older brother Gardner's bike, a circumstance that must have contributed no end to that vehicle's pedalless, tireless and seatless demise. So this new one, my very own, was something to revel in, or on. But alas—shades of King Tantalus!—it was winter, and we lived up-State New York at a time and in a town that little dreamed of snow removal as it is known today.

The meandering rut of a one-horse snowplow, augmented here and there by the fossorial urgings of an ear-muffed but ambitious property-owner, sufficed and even this was ephemeral, for an hour's snow and bluster was enough to refill such paltry paths.

• • • •

But in spite of this I'd take the new wheel out every day in another vain attempt to make bicycling a winter sport. Once or twice I tried it right down the road in the narrow right-hand lane made by the cutters and bobsleds. But around the corner by Heald's barn there would come a horse and sleigh pell-mell and a-jingle, and off I would have to go like everything into the snow-filled ditch, hoping and praying I hadn't busted a spoke or knocked any paint off. And if they pulled up to see if I was hurt, it was not to extend sympathy but only to give vent to a robust laugh.

• • • •

I have never experienced a harder, more enduring, or nastier winter than that one. Twice there were incipient thaws that gladdened my harassed heart for a few days, but there would come another freeze and make it all the slipperier, and then more snow on top of that, rendering the operation of anything on two wheels nothing but downright treacherous.

Not until my birthday, on March 27, did things begin to brighten, and even after that it was a month before the roads began to dry up, so that rides had to be limited to forays on the sidewalks, dodging old ladies with potentially broken hips, babies in excessively broad buggies, as well as that middle-aged citizenry who each seemed to be a self-appointed vigilance committee to keep boys from riding on sidewalks.

• • • •

Summer did finally come, of course, and I fully made up then for lost time and developed (I was told) a mien of superiority over my two younger pedestrian sisters, whose bicycling was confined (except for surreptitious flights far more numerous than I then suspected) to brief excursions on the handlebars.

But I had had no initial spurt of sheer enjoyment on my first and only bicycle; it was an aggravated, attenuated experience that perhaps taught me something of what life and the climate could be. Only one thing I know of might have been worse—roller skates.

PAUL H. OESHER.

Most Exciting Era.

Today is beyond comparison the most exciting time in the history of mankind. For the first time in recorded history, all the nations of the world are passing through a crisis at the same moment. Today, this month, this year, all civilization takes another step through one of those notably rare periods of transition which form the character of generations to come. Such times in the past have touched a nation, or at most a continent; but the present crisis is as acute in China as in England, in Africa as in America.

Not all transition periods are dramatic, either. The decline of Rome, for instance, was a long business. It was important because it changed the history of Europe, leaving it without a central government to impose law and order (and taxes). Europe broke into a dozen pieces. Centuries later, a brilliant era of transition came with the Renaissance and the Reformation. It had a direct effect on us because the spirit of the world changed from obedience to experiment—and during the experimental stage, fortunately, America was discovered.

There was a great era of upheaval and change after the American and French revolutions, and in this era the right of human beings to rule themselves was established. Running under this political change, there was the great transition from handwork to machine work, and this created the very system under which we still live today. What the present crisis will lead to is largely a guess.

Pop Eyes.

FOR A LONG TIME I have felt that these quarrelsome, hypersensitive, wild-eyed dictators remind me of someone or some type that I have met before. Now I have it. It is the familiar fighting drunk, known in all saloons, who leans to the bar roaring the most idiotic nonsense as dogma, disturbing the peace of the other customers and glaring into the back-bar mirror in pleased appreciation of his fighting face. He defies anyone to disagree with him, even when he flatly contradicts himself, and those who are reasonably sober try to placate him by saying, "Yes, indeed; there is much in what you say," or, "Undoubtedly you have a big thing there."

There is not much doubt that he will fight if crossed, because he is fighting drunk and spoiling for a scrap, in which he might be pretty difficult, because he is utterly reckless in his condition.

Nobody with any sense wants to provoke him, for the best possible result would be a little personal satisfaction, which would by no means compensate the wear and tear on the challenger's clothes and features, in addition to which most men of mature years avoid fighting until they are driven to it. Some can be driven to it by persistent harassment, but others will endure almost anything short of a personal attack.

* * * *

THERE IS a certain cunning in this drunken condition, so our subject appreciates the reluctance of the others to go to the floor with him and imposes on it for the sake of his ego. He tells himself that the reason nobody wants to fight is that he is a perfectly deadly fighter and brave as a lion, whereas the others are a lot of weaklings and cowards.

This feeds his self-appreciation, and he pops his eyes at his image in the mirror and roars on about politics, sport, women or any other subject that flashes through the whirling confusion of his brain. He is at least momentarily insane, and the hope of the company is that he will presently fall unconscious or take a sudden notion to go away.

It is not safe to say anything within his hearing. If two men speaking quietly down the bar happen to mention the word "wife," as often happens in bars, he may whirl around with a roar of "Who's insulting my wife?" And if someone should happen to remark that some people can't hold their liquor he may charge in bellowing that nobody can accuse him of being drunk and get away with it.

The desire to fight is almost irresistible in his condition, so he takes to annoying the others individually, moving up and down the bar to intrude in other conversations, looking for trouble and scattering insults, which, as I say, usually are accepted as of no consequence under the circumstances. But let someone answer him back and his maniacal fury is something wonderful though disgusting to behold.

* * * *

THIS RECALLS the brutal campaign of the Italians against England at the time the sanctions were voted. England's name was placed at the head of a list of fifty-four enemies of Italy in the public schools, and the children were required to memorize the list. The Italian newspapers, which are state documents, published vicious slanders, and Mussolini's push-button pep department organized great spontaneous demonstrations of patriotic wrath around the British Embassy. All this was done by Mussolini himself.

But now that some English paper has referred to the rout of the invincible Black Shirts by the Communist rabble in Spain as a little Caporetto, Mussolini rages and pops his eyes like the fighting drunk in the saloon. The British, however, appreciate the man's condition, and rather than spend a million lives over a small point they pipe down their papers and let him think he has won another victory.

In the saloons they sometimes give such a man a Mickey Finn or the bartender bides his time and whangs him on the head with his beer mallet. Or maybe some little guy ups and crowns him with a granite gobboon. At this point, however, the analogy runs out, and I just don't foresee the end of this.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Tommy Atkins Leads the Life.

England will feed the British Tommy four meals a day. This is one more than a general gets and only two less than the company cook.

* * * *

He will evidently spend most of his career eating.

* * * *

The most severe feature of British army life is to consist of getting away from the table.

* * * *

Tommy Atkins will also be served real butter instead of oleomargerine. Nothing is too good for the soldier when conditions are too bad for swift recruiting.

* * * *

Young men aren't rushing to the colors the way they used to and in order to make more of an appeal to recruits the Secretary of State for War is promising the boys the life of Reilly. (With Reilly's knife and fork.—Ed.)

* * * *

In addition to four meals a day and real butter, Tommy will get a quart of Grade A milk every morning. (Can you imagine a battle being postponed because the milkman hasn't come?)

* * * *

Milk and butter? Why even Kitchener, "Bobs" and Haig weren't always sure of that. And Kipling passed out just in time to avoid the obligation of rewriting "Gunga Din":

But when it comes to slutter
You'll do your work on butter.

* * * *

If an army crawls on its stomach the British army is going to have plenty of what it takes to crawl. And, getting back to Kipling, he would have to alter a certain famous line to read:
Where it's always double chin and milk with cream.

* * * *

The British army will also have maid service, believe it or not. Tommy no longer will be required to do his own washing, scrub the floors in officers' mess, do "kitchen police" work or polish the officers' boots.

* * * *

It may be merely a matter of time when he will be able to get a haircut and shave by pressing a button.

* * * *

All uniforms will be paid for by the government, breaking an old tradition, and barracks will be replaced by spacious lounging rooms, with a central heating plant.

* * * *

You may see a soldier refusing to go to the next war on the ground it has not been air-conditioned.

* * * *

But nothing is too good for a soldier, say we. It is high time he had four meals a day if he wants 'em. He has as much right to gout as the general staff.

Can You Remember—

Away back when nobody seized a factory for ransom?

The National Safety Council awarded New York City first prize as the city that had done the most for traffic safety. Laugh that off the next time you are in New York and the cop lets the surface car, the motor truck and the taxicab crash through the red light and chase you up the alley.

So many people are hissing American institutions these days that Elmer Twitchell is at work on a new anthem to be known as "Hooray for the Red, White and Boo."

Fulpan On The Supreme Court

Petunia Correspondent Asks Information On Proposal.

By Louis M. Jiggitts.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Petunia, Feb. 11.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

Petunia is excited over the Supreme Court. Ever since the Petunia Ladies Upward and Onward Club held a forum on the court last month, which was reported in the Verbena County Weekly Bugle and Gazette, the ladies as well as the men of our little city have been all atwitter over the matter. Your scholarly letter to Miss Primross Potts which was printed in the paper explained about the court's power, but I would like to know why the present dispute started and what you propose to do to stop it.

I have been asked to read a paper on a subject of importance at the next monthly meeting of the Petunia Literary and Betterment Society and I have decided to take the Supreme Court as my subject. I would appreciate all the information you can give on the matter.

Yours very truly,
MRS. FANNIE SITZ.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 13.

Mrs. Fannie Sitz,
Petunia.
My Dear Mrs. Sitz:

Your recent letter arrived and I am glad to know that you are interested in the very important matter of the Supreme Court. It is with pleasure that I send you under separate cover daily copies of the Congressional Record since February 5, 1937.

With best regards to you and the members of your worthy society, and with assurance that it is always my pleasure to assist a constituent in any matter. I am

Yours very truly,
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

P. S. Please pay my respects to my good friend Mr. Sitz of long standing.

Petunia, Feb. 15.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I appreciate the copies of the Congressional Record which you so kindly sent me. But I noticed in one of the copies a statement that I couldn't understand, that is, that the Senators get 100 copies free, while you get only 68 copies. Why is a Senator worth 32 more copies of the Congressional Record than a Congressman?

Yours very truly,
MRS. FANNIE SITZ.

P. S. Mr. Sitz has not been with us for many years.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.

Mrs. Fannie Sitz,
Petunia.
My dear Mrs. Sitz:

I assure you that no Senator is worth even one more Congressional Record than Congressman Fulpan.

Assuring you that it is always a pleasure to answer your questions, I am

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

P.S. I am sure that the Congressman will regret to learn of Mr. Sitz's passing.

Petunia, Feb. 19.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I am still reading the Congressional Record. In the meantime will you please let me know how all the argument started, and what you are doing about it.

Yours very truly,
MRS. FANNIE SITZ.

P.S. Whether Mr. Sitz has left this vale of tears, I don't know. He left here in a huff about 15 years ago. When he didn't come back in seven years, I had him declared dead under the law to teach him a lesson, with the assistance of Squire Wooster, our splendid justice of the peace.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21.

Mrs. Fannie Sitz,
Petunia.
My dear Mrs. Sitz:

The Congressman is unavoidably detained, but I am glad to give you the information you desire. The present dispute really started after the decision of the Supreme Court in the famous chicken case.

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

P.S. I am sure that the Congressman will be grieved to learn of Mr. Sitz's legal demise.

Petunia, Feb. 23.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

What has a chicken to do with the Supreme Court?

Yours very truly,
MRS. FANNIE SITZ.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 25.

Mrs. Fannie Sitz,
Petunia.
My dear Mrs. Sitz:

In the continued absence of the Congressman on official business, I am glad to explain the chicken case. It seems that the Government charged that a chicken was sick or unfit, which was denied. The court held that the chicken was not as sick as the Government thought, and besides the Government didn't have any interest in the chicken's health in the first place, and therefore the NRA was void. But even though the court did decide that the chicken was healthy, the decision certainly made a large number of people sick when they lost their Government jobs. I recall that three constituents of the Congressman were let go, which was very unfortunate for the Congressman. It took him nearly a month to find three more jobs in another department.

CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Assuring you that it has been a pleasure to give you this information and with best wishes, I am

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

Petunia, Feb. 27.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I received a letter from your secretary explaining the chicken case, but I am afraid that I didn't quite get it, which is due, I suppose, to my lack of legal training. I have been carefully reading the copies of the Congressional Record but have been able to complete only 12 of them. I gather that some want to add new members to the court and the judges don't want to move over and make room. What are you going to do about it?

I should also like to know what is meant by "pressure groups."

Yours very truly,
MRS. FANNIE SITZ.

Washington, D. C., March 1.

Mrs. Fannie Sitz,
Petunia.
Dear Mrs. Sitz:

I am glad that my able and efficient secretary gave you the information you desired.

Pressure groups are those who try to persuade or frighten Congressmen into voting like they desire. But I assure you that to me they are just another nuisance. In all my years as your representative I have listened to but one voice—the voice of my constituents. Of course, I am always amenable to reason, but I think that I may take pardonable pride in my record as a statesman and not a politician With best regards, I am,

Yours very truly,
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Petunia, March 3.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I have continued my steady reading of the Congressional Record, but I must admit that the more I read the more I seem to become confused. Why do they want to increase the court to 15. From what I read it seems that they are having enough trouble with the nine they already have. Why do they want to worry with six more?

Please let me have your opinion.

Yours sincerely,
MRS. FANNIE SITZ.

Washington, D. C., March 5.

Mrs. Fannie Sitz,
Petunia.
My dear Mrs. Sitz:

The Congressman is in a very important committee meeting, but I am sure that he will be delighted to tell you why they want to worry with 15 judges as soon as he returns to the office. I am,

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOLITTLE,
Secretary.

Petunia, March 7.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

From the many conferences and committee meetings you have to attend you must be a member of all the committees. We are proud of your standing. I realize that I am calling upon a busy man, but they say it's the busy man who has time to do things, don't they?

Please let me hear from you as soon as possible.

Yours sincerely,
MRS. FANNIE SITZ.

Washington, D. C., March 9.

Mrs. Fannie Sitz,
Petunia.
Dear Mrs. Sitz:

I regret that I have been so extremely busy during the past few days, but I am glad that you understand the circumstances. While I am not a member of all the committees, my position as one of the leaders requires my attendance at many conferences on important subjects before Congressmen, and I am sure that you realize there are many matters of vital interest before us at the present time.

However, I shall certainly always have the time to give attention to matters which interest my constituents. To serve a constituent is always a pleasure.

Yours very truly,
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

TELEGRAM.
PETUNIA, 3-11-37.
WHY DO THEY WANT MORE JUDGES?
MRS. FANNIE SITZ.

Washington, D. C., March 5.

Mrs. Fannie Sitz,
Petunia.
My dear Mrs. Sitz:

The reason they want more judges is to infuse new blood into the court; in short, to add new judges in touch with present life and problems of the people and with other ideas.

Yours very truly,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

Petunia, March 11.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I have not completed reading all the copies of the Congressional Record which you sent me. But from your able secretary's letter, I think I now understand what the dispute is about. They want to put new men on the court who know what life is about. I have noticed a number of suggestions and I have an idea of my own which I should like you to consider.

As you know, they say a man who works up from the bottom makes a good man when he gets to the top. Why not require the Supreme Court judges to work up in the profession? Let them start as justices of the peace and then they'll know life and all kind of law when they reach the top.

What's wrong with the idea?

Yours very truly,
MRS. FANNIE SITZ.

Washington, D. C., March 13.

Mrs. Fannie Sitz,
Petunia.
My dear Mrs. Sitz:

You suggest that the Supreme Court judges be justices of the peace, and you want to know what's wrong with the idea. I regret that the Congressman is again in an important conference, but I shall place your letter before him as soon as he returns to the office and I am sure that he will be glad to tell you what's wrong.

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

Petunia, March 15.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan.

In view of our previous correspondence, I would like to suggest that you just write me a statement of the controversy and give me your opinion. I should like to quote you in the paper which I shall prepare for the Petunia Literary and Betterment Society.

Yours very truly,
MRS. FANNIE SITZ.

Washington, D., C., March 17.

Mrs. Fannie Sitz,
Petunia.
CONFIDENTIAL.
Dear Mrs. Sitz:

I prefer that you not quote me at present. While, as you know, I am never reluctant to express myself openly and fearlessly on any question of importance, I am still giving this matter my closest study in an effort to arrive at a decision which will be in the best interest of the entire country, and any statement by me in the press, or at a public gathering at this time, would be premature. Dodging any issue is entirely foreign to my nature, but for the future welfare of all concerned, I think I should keep my counsel. At a time when tempers are hot, calm judgment is at a premium.

I hope that I have made myself clear and that you will understand the delicate position I occupy as one of the leaders here.

I am, your sincerely,
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Petunia, March 21.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I have your confidential letter. I want you to know that I greatly appreciate your taking me into your confidence and I fully understand your position. But since you don't think it advisable to say anything in public, I have thought that it would be wise for me not to either. And so, I have decided to give a paper on current poetry instead.

As you know, I have often contributed to the Verbena County Weekly Bugle and Gazette and I am sending you a short poem. I have dedicated this little quadrant which is a four lined poem to you. You have my permission to insert it in the Congressional Record, and as I shall publish it in our paper, it should get wide circulation. I think you desire it.

The title is: "A Splendid Congressman."

While hot tempers do prevail
All over the country to no avail
His calm judgment does not fail
Cicero Fulpan, all hail, ALL HAIL!

Yours sincerely,
MRS. FANNIE SITZ.

Washington, D. C., March 25.

Mrs. Fannie Sitz,
Petunia.
Dear Mrs. Sitz:

I acknowledge receipt of your delightful poem. Because it concerns me I should not care to insert it in the Congressional Record myself. I am sure that you will understand that my reluctance to do so is dictated by my inherent abhorence to personal publicity. But, while I do not deserve the wonderful expressions, I shall ask a colleague to insert it because I feel that a poem by such a worthy author deserves national recognition.

Assuring you that I deeply appreciate your esteem, I am, your grateful friend.

No Vacuum

Our Liberties And Theirs.

ON WEDNESDAY night in Constitution Hall, while Prof. Harold J. Laski was discussing the prospects of democracy in Europe, he was interrupted by a sudden burst of applause. It followed his reference to the victory of the Popular Front in France and the "coming victory of the Popular Front in Spain."

The handclapping that greeted this prediction was spontaneous, prolonged and obviously heart-felt. It was a tribute to the heroic efforts which the loyalists have been making to prevent the overthrow of their regime by a military force largely alien in its personnel. It was also the expression of a deep-seated feeling that the cause of democracy is a world-wide cause; that the American people, therefore, cannot be indifferent to the events taking place in the Iberian peninsula.

* * * *

THAT APPLAUSE was distinctly in the American tradition. It echoed the jubilation with which the news of the fall of the Bastile in 1789 was greeted. It was in line with the attitude taken by the people of the United States toward the rebellious South American colonies of Spain. Similar manifestations have repeatedly colored our history.

Of late, however, the robust optimism of Americans regarding the inevitability of the spread of the democratic system to all corners of the world has given way to an equally naive pessimism.

The lamps of freedom, as Prof. Laski declared in his address, have been going out all over Europe. What happened in Italy in 1922, in Germany in 1933, in Austria in 1934 may happen anywhere else—even in lands where democracy has long been established. For not only within each land are there elements openly or covertly sympathetic to dictatorships but the existing Fascist dictatorships have, of late, sought to widen the spheres of operation of their anti-democratic philosophies far beyond their own borders.

It was at the instance of Mussolini that Austrian democracy was forcibly smashed. Now Spain is the intended victim.

This attempt may succeed. That will largely depend on whether or not the defeat of the Italian army at Guadalajara will be followed by large-scale Italian intervention to weigh the scales overwhelmingly in Franco's favor. And that, in turn, will depend on whether the democracies stand by helplessly and permit this action.

In any case if Fascism is victorious in Spain, Spain will not be the last victim of Fascist aggression.

* * * *

YET, PARADOXICALLY, the financial, economic and even military balance of power rests decidedly with the great democracies. Great Britain, France, the United States, the Scandinavian kingdoms, the British dominions, Holland, Belgium and Czechoslovakia have all safely weathered the depression. They have done so without abandoning the liberties they have enjoyed. Yet in the field of foreign policy the major democracies continue to act with excessive timidity in a spirit of almost complete hopelessness.

That spirit is changing. Defeatism is no longer completely the order of the day. If the change has been long in coming it is nevertheless on the way.

Italian democracy was overthrown practically without a struggle; German democracy capitulated by default. The turn came in Austria, where the workingmen, barricading themselves in their homes, fought with a fury that won the admiration of the world. And in France, where next Fascism raised its head, it was the democratic elements which, by uniting their forces, won the day.

Now it is the totalitarian states which are on the defensive. It is proving more and more difficult for them to find victims. There are not, as the struggle in Spain has revealed, many Ethiopias in the world.

* * * *

FOR SOME TIME many Americans have harbored the illusion that the United States is a world apart. Whatever happens abroad, it has been said, is of no concern to us. Our policy should be Uncle Sam for himself and the devil take the hindmost. Let us build a paper barrier of mandatory neutrality legislation around our borders and we shall be safe from war.

But it is absurd to believe that we can by law achieve our isolation. We are inextricably part and parcel of the world. The spread of Fascism abroad constitutes, it may be in an indirect but nonetheless real sense, a threat to us even as the triumph of American democracy constitutes a challenge to Fascism. Of this European dictatorships are distinctly conscious, if we are not.

In any case it is clear, as is shown by Prof. Laski's audience, that many Americans care and care passionately about the survival of liberty in the world. Neutrality of thought is impossible in a world of thinking men, and without such indifference to the tides that sweep the world real neutrality is a body without a head, a monster that cannot long survive.

Bernhardt

By William Lyon Phelps.

A Memorial.

I am very glad to learn that a statue to the great actress, Sarah Bernhardt, will be erected this spring at Andernos, a seaside resort on the Bay of Biscay, not far from Biarritz, which is one of the most famous seaside places of the world. It seems that Sarah came there in November, 1914, and stayed for two years, and she used to say that those were some of the happiest days of her life. She was very kind and friendly and intimate with the permanent residents of the place; and they all admired her for her genius and loved her for her unaffected good nature. The Villa Eureka, where she lived, remains just as it was during her residence. Now the people of Andernos are so proud that the great actress lived there that they have decided to have a statue. It will be dedicated with appropriate ceremonies sometime this spring.

In thinking over the greatest theatrical performances I have ever seen I put first of all the Passion Play at Oberammergau. Although of course the cast of 750 contained no professional actors, the peasants acted their parts with such tremendous sincerity, and the drama, being the greatest historical scene of all time, produced a deeper and more lasting impression on me than any other production.

* * * *

Apart from that, it has been my good fortune to see all the greatest actors of the last 50 years; Salvini, Edwin Booth, Richard Mansfield, Possart, Kainz, Mounet-Sully, Feraudy, Henry Irving, to name only some of those who are no longer living. But first and foremost in my recollection is the night in Boston when I saw Sarah Bernhardt act in Sardou's melodrama "La Tosca." Every scene in that play is as distinct in my memory as if I hard heard it yesterday; and the tones of her voice of gold will remain in my mind as long as I live.

"Humanized" Cemeteries.

Frank Lloyd Wright, foremost exponent of the functional school in architecture, spoke before the Memorial Craftsmen of America and urged that they "humanize the cemeteries."

"If we are to be regimented while we are alive," he said, according to the New York Herald-Tribune, "for God's sake give us room enough to lie in, gracefully separate and beautiful, informal in arrangement, when we are dead."

"Monuments," he continued, "are merely a form of grandomania, and grandomania has gone so far with us now that we really should take steps to see that it is discouraged. And if monuments must be, why not now extend the monument horizontally, keeping it broad and low instead of pushing it upward to make the usual inane forest of stone posts."

Mr. Wright's advice to the monument makers fits in with his own theories of architecture—low, horizontal lines, the elimination of protruding masses, and the blending of ground and building, his favorite "organic function" of architecture.

Venereal Diseases Discussed By Group of College Students

Subject Sensibly Treated by Mixed Audience; Physician Writes on Symptoms and Care of Syphilis.

By Gerald G. Gross.

Mrs. Grundy is on the run.

Within the last few weeks syphilis has been discussed, freely and openly, in places where very mention of the word was previously unknown.

Only Tuesday night 80 students of American University assembled to hear a talk by Ray H. Everett, executive secretary of the Social Hygiene Society, on venereal diseases. It was a mixed audience and the young men and women asked sensible questions.

Mrs. Grundy would have frowned on such goings-on, but she is not interested, of course, in abatement of Washington's and the Nation's most pressing public health problem. The words of Surgeon General Thomas Parran are not for her:

"Syphilis control is not the business of the public health officer alone nor yet of the private physician or the social worker. It is a job for the whole people which can be done only with their understanding and co-operation."

Often Shows on Skin.

Three social hygiene clinics are in charge of the physician who has written the contribution for today. His subject is the effect of syphilis upon the skin. He says:

Although syphilis is essentially a disease of the blood, it frequently first shows itself on the skin. Where the germ first enters the body, it usually causes a small sore called a chancre. Most often this sore appears on the genitals or lips, 10 to 30 days after exposure.

Sometimes, the microbe gets into the body without causing a chancre. At first, the blood test is not always positive, but in a few weeks the disease can be found in the blood by means of the Wassermann or Kahn test. If treatment is started in this primary stage of the disease a cure is usually possible. Naturally, during this stage the infected person should avoid contact with other persons.

After three to eight weeks the little ulcer heals, but such a change does not mean the disease is cured. If treatment has not been started, the germs remain in the blood and, in some people, produce a rash all over the body.

Secondary Stage.

This rash may appear from six weeks to two years after the appearance of the original small sore. This is called the secondary stage. It is often mistaken for other diseases such as measles, etc., and consequently very frequently goes unnoticed. At times it is quite pronounced in that it is accompanied by headache, moderate fever, sore throat, pains in the joints, etc. The blood Wassermann is positive in this stage, but the chances of cure are still good, if treatment is started and continued for a period of at least 18 months.

Sometimes, only the sore thoat or the vague aches and pains occur without the rash; or, on the contrary, one may entirely escape the secondary stage. However, should one have this stage and pass through it without treatment, often the various symptoms recur from time to time with a rash so insignificant that it goes unnoticed, or, with the other signs mistaken for a cold or simple sore throat.

If the disease remains untreated after the secondary stage, the germ lies dormant in the system during what is known as a latent period, which exists from two to ten years or more without any signs of the disease except a positive blood test.

After this period there is the so-called third or tertiary stage, during which the patient develops sores that appear as boils seldom numbering over three or four. These are known as gumma. They are slow to heal by ordinary methods—a fact which leads the doctor to test the patient's blood. In this stage these sores are by no means the only signs of the disease. These small sores which appear on the skin may occur within the body and produce various conditions described in other articles in this series.

Remember that you can have syphilis in your blood without a rash on your skin.

Disease, Not Disgrace.

Babies born with syphilis often have a rash similar to that of the secondary stage. Since they are babies, they have no resistance to the disease; therefore, it is frequently more severe on them in the first few weeks of life, but, if they are treated promptly, oftentimes they can be cured.

In conclusion, then, let it be remembered that syphilis is a disease, not a disgrace. If you have it, get under thorough and prompt treatment by some good private physician; or, if you are unable to pay, go to the hospital clinic in your neighborhood or phone the District Medical Society or District Health Department, and you will be advised where you can obtain treatment for a small fee, if not gratis.

If you are suspicious that you may have syphilis, have a Wassermann or Kahn test performed and discuss its results and the history of your case with your doctor. Do not try to interpret the test yourself.

Above all, you can be cured if you try. Be true to yourself, and trust your doctor to advise you how to become well.

(Tomorrow: "Syphilis and Mental Disorder.")

2 More Sentenced For Stealing Votes

Kansas City, March 26 (AP).—Prison sentences piled up to an even dozen for convicted Kansas City vote thieves today when Federal Judge Albert L. Reeves sentenced two Democratic precinct captains to three years each in Leavenworth Penitentiary.

Judge Reeves imposed the sentences on George Neeper and Frank Ditsch, jr., and placed four convicted women defendants on probation for a year after a defense attorney pleaded for mercy by calling attention to the day—Good Friday.

"Your honor," said Attorney Ludwig Graves, "in asking for mercy for these defendants, I want to call your attention to the words of the Man who said on this day many years ago: 'Forgive them, they know not what they do.'"

Consumer to Bear Boost in Coal Rate

By the Associated Press.

A retail coal merchants' organization informed the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday that any increase in freight rates on coal and coke would be passed on to the consumer.

Opposing the petition of class 1 railroads for a general upward revision of rates, Frank E. Monnin, vice president of the National Retail Coal Merchants Association, said at a commission hearing:

"Any increase must be passed on to the consuming public as our margins have been reduced in an effort to retain business to such a point that it is impossible to absorb any more charges.

"The National Coal Merchants Association is opposed to any increase in freight rates on bituminous, anthracite and coke as we feel certain the consumer will not pay such increase."

New York, March 26 (AP).—Officials of the first international conference on fever therapy, opening here March 30, announced today receipt of a message from the State Department in Washington saying the German government has canceled plans to send seven officials to the meeting.

The German foreign office, in a message to the American Embassy in Berlin, the officials said, stated the plans were canceled "for technical reasons."

Conference leaders blamed the recent exchange of diplomatic representations between the United States and Germany concerning two attacks made by Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York on Hitler and German press attacks against Americans and American institutions.

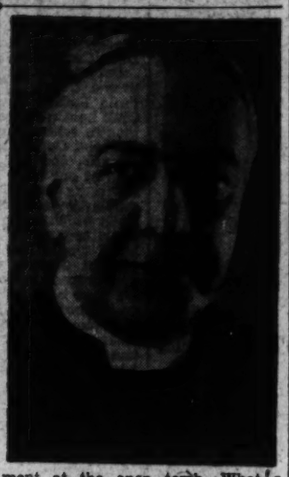
Today's Sermon

By the Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D.,
Bishop of Washington.



The night is the symbol of disappointed hopes, disillusionment and despair. The dawn is the emblem of a better outlook, finer expectations and freshened assurance. It is common to speak of a new and better day. The night may be full of shadows and strange and unreasoned conjectures, but the morning finds us more refreshed and better able to face the world and its problems.

It was at dawn very early in the morning that distracted women and disciples came with sorrowing hearts to the tomb of their seemingly defeated Leader. All their expectations had been frustrated. They had seen their hopes crucified upon a cross. It was with the dawn of the first Easter Day that all their fears were dispelled; their hopes freshened; their expectations realized. The resurrection of Christ came with the dawn. From the tomb He issued forth to tell the world that a new and better day had come. The dawn brought a new interpretation of the meaning of life itself; the yearning of the ages had its fulfillment at the open tomb. What a symbol this day is of life's highest attainment and satisfaction!

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Thine, O Lord, is the greatness, and the power, and the glory, and the victory, and the majesty: for all that is in the heaven and in the earth is thine; thine is the kingdom, O Lord, and thou art exalted as head above all." (I Chronicles 29:11.)

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "The scriptures imply that God is All-in-all. From this it follows that nothing possesses reality nor existence except the divine Mind and His ideas."

I. C. C. Official Asks Extension Of Capital Area

Report Includes Several Suburbs for Carrier Act Purposes.

For purposes of administering the motor-carrier act, extension of Washington's metropolitan area to include certain nearby suburbs was proposed yesterday to the Interstate Commerce Commission by Examiner Paul Coyle.

According to the act, the rates of motor carriers operating within "a municipality, contiguous municipalities, or zones adjacent to municipalities," are not subject to jurisdiction of the commission.

The suburbs Coyle would include in "municipal" Washington are Garrett Park, Kensington, the part of Bethesda which lies within Montgomery County, and the following sections of the Wheaton District: South and west of the highway extending east and southeast from Garrett Park through Kensington, Wheaton, Chestnut Ridge and Four Corners to the line dividing Prince Georges and Montgomery counties.

Coyle's report was, in effect, a compromise between the Capital Transit Co., which asked exemption for its bus operations as far out as Laurel and Gaithersburg, in Maryland, and Mount Vernon, in Virginia, and the State Corporation Commission of Virginia, which asked that the area coincide with the District boundary lines.

Unless it is opposed by the commission or private parties, Coyle's report will take effect at the end of 20 days.

Senator Will Seek Supreme Court Aid

By the United Press.

Senator Lewis B. Schwellenbach (Democrat), Washington, announced last night he will introduce Monday a resolution asking the Supreme Court to adopt a rule so that it could provide Congress with advisory opinions.

While he said the Supreme Court had never rendered advisory opinions, seven States provide for such possibilities in their constitutions and the Nebraska Supreme Court had given such advisory opinions on at least four occasions without it being authorized in the State constitution.

Schwellenbach said that Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes' letter to Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, this week was "clearly an advisory opinion on a matter which has never even formally been presented to the Congress."

Rev. Stoddard Dies On Trip Westward

District Student Dies Of Car Crash Injuries

James Laughlin, 24, a freshman at Columbus University Law School, died yesterday at Allegany Hospital, Cumberland, Md., after an automobile crash, it was reported by the Associated Press. His home was at Westernport, Md.

Laughlin left Washington on his Easter vacation Wednesday night. The accident occurred near Cresaptown. Edmund J. Niland, driver of the car, said he was forced off the road by another car which was "hogging the road."

Torch Death Indicated Suicide by Testimony

New Castle, Ind., March 26 (AP).—Seeking to determine definitely whether the torch death of 28-year-old Mabel Sutton was a murder or a suicide, Capt. Matt Leach, of the State police, conferred here today with Henry County officials.

The burned and mutilated body of the blonde young woman who became a factory worker after losing her job as a school teacher, was found Monday in a wood near here. Prosecutor H. M. Edwards indicated he believed Miss Sutton might have committed suicide. He said two men saw Miss Sutton walking along a country road near here March 12, carrying a jar of colorless liquid. Officers found a jar near her body which, they said, apparently had contained kerosene.

Other speakers on the broadcast will be William S. Paley, president of the Columbia Broadcasting System; Alfred J. Following the broadcast, George V. Denny, jr., of the Town Hall of the Air, will conduct a brief symposium, after the fashion of his Thursday night Town Hall radio programs discussing studio audiences from the viewpoint of performers and public.

Choice of the winning programs for the awards will be made primarily on the basis of a nation-wide poll conducted among the constituency of the Women's National Radio Committee, but members of the executive committee and experts in the various fields have been called in to assist in making the final decision. Prince Georges Bill to Prevent Bonding Fraud

Measure Requires Police to Take Offenders to Nearest Justice.

County police who fail to adhere to the law requiring them to take arrested persons before the nearest justice of the peace will be suspended ten days without pay under the terms of a bill introduced in the House of Delegates at Annapolis, Md., yesterday by the Prince Georges delegation.

An outgrowth of the sensational investigation of an alleged bonding racket in the county, the bill also provides for a fine of from $5 to $50.

It is designed to tighten the existing law, which merely states that prisoners shall be hailed before the nearest magistrate without providing punishment for offenders.

During the alleged bonding racket inquiry, which resulted in indictments against seven policemen, a justice of the peace and a bondsman, it was pointed out repeatedly, as evidence of a collusion, that almost all the persons arrested on traffic charges on the Baltimore boulevard were taken before the same justice.

The delegation introduced a third bill, designed to lower the cost of peddlers' licenses in the county.

Two additional bills passed the lower house yesterday and were sent to the Senate.

One provides for incorporation of the town of District Heights and the other increases the tax rate in Brentwood, Md., from 20 cents to 25 cents on each $100.

Filipino Fanatics Endure Torture in Good Friday Rites

Manila, March 26.—Thousands of Filipino "flagellentes" flogged and tortured themselves today in villages throughout the Philippines in fanatical religious observance of Good Friday. The strange rites were introduced into the islands while under Spanish rule, and are performed annually.

The self torturers slashed their backs with broken glass and sharp sticks, then whipped themselves with bamboo flails until blood ran from lacerations.

Pagan Rites Portrayed.

Phoenix, Ariz., March 26 (AP).—Yaqui Indians, portraying their half-pagan, half-Christian version of the Easter story, shot "Christ" with a pop gun today. In any other setting it would have been ludicrous. But to the Yaquis the firing of a pop gun at the image of Christ was a reverent portrayal of his crucifixion.

Man With Biblical Play Sought in Film Threats

Los Angeles, March 26 (AP).—A man who has been trying to sell a biblical scenario to the movies and play the leading role was sought by police tonight in their investigation of extortion notes sent to two members of the Hollywood film colony.

Police said the man may be the person who sent letters demanding $20,000 each to Anna May Wong, Chinese actress, and David O. Selznick, producer. In both letters, the writer said he resembled Jesus Christ and wanted to play the role. Movie executives told authorities they had been annoyed recently by a man with similar ideas.

Gains Reported In Commodity Price Listings

Reserve Board Finds General Wholesale Level Up for 5 Weeks.

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that the general level of wholesale commodity prices advanced from the middle of February to the third week of March.

The increase, it said, reflected largely "further substantial increases in the prices of industrial materials."

"Prices of iron and steel, nonferrous metals, lumber, cotton, rubber and hides advanced considerably," the board reported, "and there were also increases in the prices of cotton goods, paper and furniture."

The board's index of industrial production last month stood at 116 per cent of the 1923-25 average, compared with 114 in January and 115 in the last quarter of 1936.

"At steel mills," the board said, "activity continued to increase in February and the first three weeks of March, and, although the growth was somewhat less than seasonal, output currently is at about the peak level reached in the summer of 1929."

Although fluctuating considerably with strikes at important plants, automobile production was said to have increased thus far this year over the corresponding 1936 period.

The board said factory employment and pay rolls rose more than the usual seasonal amount from the middle of January to mid-February.

Department store sales in February were reported at 95 per cent of the 1923-25 average, compared with 93 per cent in January.

Detectives Picture Of Speed; Answer Alarm in Second

Police radio broadcasts attained perfection yesterday when a call sent from the Detective Bureau was answered in less than one second.

Capt. Ira E. Keck, assistant chief of detectives, had called the dispatcher and asked that a message be sent to Detective Sergts. Thomas Sweeney or Michael Mahaney to communicate with him immediately.

Sweeney and Mahaney opened the door to the captain's office and inquired: "Do you want us?"

They had been standing right outside the door when the call was sent.

Officers Named For Fire Company

Officers of the new fire company which will begin operating within the next two weeks from No. 15 truck company firehouse at Thirteenth street and Rhode Island avenue northeast were announced yesterday when the Commissioners ordered promotions of eight firemen.

Kite, E. C. Jones, R. C. Emerson and W. J. Walsmith were raised to the rank of sergeants. Paul E. Regan and Eugene K. Will were appointed privates for a probationary period of one year.

Extra compensation of $5 monthly for meritorious service was ordered for Sergeants Harold Wilson and G. E. Swords and Privates J. Q. Barnes, A. L. Sharper, F. J. Widmayer, W. J. Carmalt and M. C. Fairall.

F. L. Maytag Dies At 80 in California

Los Angeles, March 26 (AP).—F. L. Maytag, 80, founder of a nationally known washing machine company bearing his name, died early today at Good Samaritan Hospital.

A philanthropist, he was active as a civic leader until his retirement because of age several years ago.

Florence Nightingale's Associate Dies in West

San Francisco, March 26 (AP).—Mrs. Luella Papper, deputy coroner, said tonight flames which apparently started from an overturned lamp has burned to death "Mother" Minerva Hartman, 104-year-old nursing veteran of three wars.

Mrs. Hartman, who said she served with Florence Nightingale in Crimea, died in a fire which destroyed her little home on stilts last night.

Her home became known as "Minerva's Fort" about four years ago when she defied highway officials who sought to move the building for a road re-routing. The dispute was compromised when the house was raised on stilts.

Jury Criticizes State in Moron Killing of Kin

Pa. Institution Blamed for Inmate's Escape and Nonreturn.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chambersburg, Pa., March 26.—A coroner's jury blamed Oscar Shriver today for the slaying of his nephew, Floyd Shriver, jr., and criticized the State for permitting him to remain at liberty after being held in an institution for mental defectives for 19 years.

The jury found young Floyd had died from "strangulation at the hands of Oscar Shriver" last Monday.

The coroner's jury report stated: "We deplore the policy of the officials of the State institution in which Oscar Shriver was an inmate for 19 years, in permitting him to remain at his home after he ran away from that institution 18 months ago, when it was known that he was a menace to society."

Oscar Shriver had been an inmate at Pennhurst School for Feebleminded Boys. He is held in Franklin County Jail charged with murder in his nephew's death.

Three Professors Named At Virginia University

Special Dispatch to The Post.

John Ritchie 3d, professor of law in the University of Maryland, was elected professor of law; Dr. Karl R. Wallace, assistant professor of English in Washington University, was elected associate professor of public speaking, and Dr. Ladley Husted, who is now research fellow at the Innes Horticultural Foundation in England, was elected assistant professor of biology.

Mock Judas Cuffed And Maltreated in Italian Ceremony

Anticoli Corrado, Italy, March 26 (AP).—Easter peasants lost in religious fervor cuffed and screamed insults today at the most unpopular of their community, forced to play the role of Judas Iscariot, as they re-enacted the entombment of Christ.

A dummy coffin, supposed to contain the body of Christ, was carried through the village streets in traditional Good Friday ceremony to the local burial ground.

So sorrowfully vituperative did spectators become that the poor mimic Judas had to leave the procession before it reached the outskirts and hide in the home of a friend.

Envoys' Children Plan Easter Observances

Egg-Hunts and Traditional American Festivities to Be Held at Embassies and Homes of Diplomats; White House Party Monday.

By Dudley Harmon.

Most of the members of the diplomatic set are spending Easter in Washington. The observance of the season at the embassies and legations, where there are children, will follow in most respects that which is traditional in America.

The three young daughters of the Italian Ambassador and Donna Matilde de Suvich are remaining at the embassy, while their parents have gone to Charleston, S. C., for the week-end. The children undoubtedly will celebrate Easter in the American fashion, for it is that of their own country as well.

In fact, most of the children of the countries of Europe look forward to the regular Easter morning scramble for colored eggs hidden by their parents. In the South American republics, the observance is strictly a religious one. However, the three children of the Dominican Minister and Senora de Pastoriza will make a concession tomorrow to our customs. They are Andres, Tomas and Mathilde, and all three are home from school for the holidays.

The season has double significance for the Minister of the Irish Free State and Mrs. MacWhite, who are spending the week-end in Washington. Easter Monday is the twenty-first anniversary of the 1916 rebellion in Dublin. In Eire-there'll be great army parades as well as the religious festivals and the "ceilidhe," indoor dances and games.

Young Marjorie de Morgenstierne, daughter of the Norwegian Minister and Mme. de Morgenstierne, will celebrate Easter tomorrow just as she does in her own country. The Easter rabbit is well known there, too, and the only difference between their observance and ours is, that that Norwegians do not have a parade of Spring styles—it's still too cold there for anything other than the usual winter furs.

The Greek Minister, Mr. Demetrios Sicilianos, is celebrating tomorrow, but for a different reason than ours. Easter is not observed until May 2 in Greece this year, but the Minister will entertain at a reception for members of the Greek colony in observance of the anniversary of that country's independence.

In Poland Easter is observed somewhat as a feast day, to celebrate the ending of the 40 days of fast. A rich cake called "mazurkis" is always served and undoubtedly the Polish Ambassador, Count Potocki, and his little son will have "mazurkis" tomorrow. The Poles also paint eggs for the children to find, as do the Hungarians, the Rumanians, the Swiss and the Portuguese. The latter go one step further and wrap the eggs in a rich sweetmeat.

Monday the diplomatic children will celebrate all over again, when they attend the annual egg-rolling party on the White House lawn, at which Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt will be present.

Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, wife of the Senator from Illinois, is holding a reception of several hundred guests this afternoon in the East Room of the Mayflower Hotel. Members of the diplomatic, official and residential groups are included among her guests.

THE MERRY WHIRL

By Marylyn.

Anne Bonner, she of the delicate blonde coloring, has just the right bag to complete her Easter outfit. The suit, incidentally, is dark blue with accents of red, and the bag is of beads of the identical shades. It came from Panama and we understand from a very reliable source that it was the gift of a certain young officer in the fleet down there. What will be the next bit of news in this quarter, we wonder.

Now that sit-down strikes have had their day, there is a new ogre of this nature looming on the rapidly darkening horizon—the language strike. It has all been started by one very young man—3 years old in fact. This little rebel is Jean Lucet, bright-eyed little son of the Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Lucet. His parents had tried and tried to get him to learn English, but he flatly refused to have anything to do with it. Now, not only has he succeeded in his arguments against it, but has converted all of the youngsters in his neighborhood to his side, and is teaching them the fundamentals of youthful chatter a la Francaise.

Practically on the eve of their departure for their home in Tegucigalpa, Honduras, the Minister and Mme. Lozano are to be royally entertained at dinner and dancing Monday evening at the Shoreham. Their host is to be none other than jolly Don Julian Caceres.

Merry laughter will ring out tomorrow evening in the Costa Rican Legation. Mme. Castro Beeche, wife of the Minister, is up to her ears in plans for the party which she will give in honor of daughter Helen. It is not a birthday, at least that is what we have been told, but one last gay party for Senorita Helen and her hosts of young friends before she goes back to her studies at the Mount St. Agnes Academy in Baltimore.

When the Royal S. Copelands went up to New York the other day, they had in mind more than the wedding of Lyla Townsend and Prew Savoy, which they attended, because tomorrow, Easter Sunday, their newest grandchild, wee Ruth, is to be christened. How very appropriate, say we. Another interesting bit is that she will be christened with a few sparkling crystal water drops that Mrs. Copeland ever so carefully brought back from the River Jordan. This Copeland family is simply packed full of romantic ideas and traditions.

Service Club Redecorating Under Way

Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Retreat Is Being Painted.

Women's League Group Supervising Spring Housecleaning.

Spring housecleaning and redecorating has been going on at the Soldiers Sailors and Marines Club at Eleventh and L streets under the supervision of Mrs. Wallace Lind, chairman of the house committee of the Woman's Army and Navy League.

Since the club was established it has been one of the chief interests of the league, whose members see that its rooms are cheerfully and comfortably furnished, supplied with books and games, and that it is maintained as it should be for the use of the men of the various branches of the service when they are in the Capital.

The recreation room and library have been redecorated this season. In the former, murals are being painted by Mrs. Joseph Wright, who designed and executed the background for the Venetian room at the Venetian ball given last fall at the Willard for the benefit of the Navy Relief Fund. She has been going to the club almost daily from her home in Alexandria and working on the murals, often with interested spectators watching the progress of the painting. The scene will be a sort of merry-go-round of the activities of the soldiers, sailors and marines.

The Woman's Army and Navy League met this week with Mrs. Walter S. Grant, wife of Brig. Gen. Grant, commandant of the War College, presiding, and discussed plans for the rummage sale to be held early in May, proceeds of which will go to the fund for the club. The league this year observes its fifty-first anniversary and Mrs. J. C. Kelton, who was one of its charter members, still attends its meetings. She is the mother of Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, and still is actively interested in the work of the organization she helped to form.

On Mrs. Lind's committee are Mrs. Warren Hannum, Mrs. Emmett Gudger, Mrs. D. B. Crafton and Mrs. Lucian Burnham.

Feasts Here Again After Lenten Fast

Suggestions Are Listed for Repasts in Holiday Week.

By Rebekah Blake.

Happy Easter! That has a joyous sound, for it means the putting off of sackcloth and ashes and starting life anew. After the long days of Lent with its fasting, feasting is again the order of the day and Washingtonians will be entertaining tomorrow either for a noon breakfast, an Easter dinner, an afternoon tea, or a buffet supper.

To the hostess, Easter is not one day—it is a week of entertaining from the hot cross buns on Good Friday to the last candy Easter egg in the basket. This season of festivities demands its own special foods. Eggs and ham are customary American versions of what is good and proper to be found on Easter menus, and their glorification for this purpose is traditional.

One of the most delightful traditions is the Easter breakfast-luncheon. That noon breakfast following church is an important festivity and should be a real repast.

Easter Breakfast.

Grapefruit Cocktail
Mint Ice
French Omelet
Grilled Sausages and Peach Halves
Spoon Bread
Coffee
Date Whip.

Roast pork or leg of lamb answer the meat needs for the Easter Sunday dinner. These meats are a good relief after fasting. Stuffed pork is the traditional meat. Especially in the southern part of Maryland and Virginia. These hams are often given to friends as Easter remembrances. According to Frederick Philip Stieff, author of "Eat, Drink and Be Merry In Maryland," this method of cooking hams originated with the early settlers of Maryland. He says: "After the fast of Lent, it was considered imprudent to eat too greatly of fat meats, and this method came into usage."

The hams are not stuffed with bread dressing as you would imagine. A vegetable mixture of kale, Bermuda onions, celery seed, mustard seed, powdered mustard, black pepper and salt is used. The ingredients vary according to the size of the ham. After being parboiled for less than an hour, the ham is removed from the kettle, the outer skin peeled off and small, deep incisions to the bone are made in it with a butcher's knife. The salad greens, well chopped and mixed with the seasonings and liquor from the ham, are then forced into these slits. Any of the mixture remaining is spread over the top of the meat and the ham is carefully covered and sewed up in a muslin cloth. The final cooking in a large kettle filled with cold water takes around three or four hours. When the meat is cool, the cloth covering is removed and the ham is placed on a large platter. It is brought to the table cold.

Easter Dinner.

Fruit Cocktail in Orange Baskets
Stuffed Roast Pork
Stewed Red Tomatoes
Candied Sweet Potatoes
Easter Egg Salad
Easter Lily Rolls Butter
Coffee
Pineapple Daffodil Cake

Easter is an excellent occasion for an afternoon tea. Make it a festive one and carry out Easter colors of green, yellow and violet in your decorations. Suggestions for an Easter tea party are:

Hot Tea Cofee
Cornucopia Sandwiches
Deviled Ham Sandwiches
Cream Cheese and Watercress Sandwiches
Nut Bread Sandwiches
Orange Ice Lime Ice
Fancy Cakes
Green and Yellow Mints
Mixed Nuts.

Easter Supper.

Easter supper is another interesting time for a feast. As eggs are traditional for this occasion, plan an egg salad-cheese loaf for the main course of the meal. This is pressed into a pan and chilled, then cut in slices or squares on lettuce as a salad. Serve appetizers made by stuffing tiny cream puff shells, also made with eggs, with whipped cream seasoned with salt or a few drops of onion juice, lemon juice, mayonnaise or horseradish. Or you may fill these shells with any of the canape spreads.

This menu may be helpful to you in planning your Easter supper:

Cream Puff Appetizers
Mushroom Soup
Egg Salad-Cheese Loaf
Cold Sliced Meat
Assorted Crackers
Pickles Olives Celery
Sponge Cake Filled With Small Scoops of Ice Cream

Egg Salad-Cheese Loaf.

(Pan 7x2¼x3¼.)

8 hard-cooked eggs
½ pound well-ripened cheese
8 chackers
1 small can pimento (optional)
6 sweet pickles
Mayonnaise or salad dressing
Salt
Cayenne (few grains if desired)

Chop or grind all ingredients except mayonnaise and salt. Add sufficient dressing to flavor and bind it. Season the mixture to taste. Press into paper-lined pan and chill. Serve in squares or slices on lettuce as a salad, as a sandwich slice, or on canapes. It is most attractive heaped in a small bowl from which guests may "spread" their own.

Tinted Milk Appealing.

If your small children refuse to drink milk, try tinting it with vegetable coloring and putting a little ice cream in it. You will find that they will drink their milk readily.

An Easter Basket for Youngsters

The grown-ups aren't the only ones who enjoy Easter and its round of festivities. Children, too, like to have their little friends in for a bit of refreshment. Mr. Bunny is a beloved master of ceremonies at a children's Easter party when he presides over the distribution of candy eggs that bring delight to his guests. The colorful candy eggs for the basket need put no added burden on mother's shoulders, for the children themselves can make them, without danger of burned fingers, from a sweetened condensed milk candy that is smooth and creamy without cooking. If the children want the candies chocolate dipped a grown-up can melt the chocolate for them in the top of a double boiler, and then let it stand until it is slightly cooled, when it is best for dipping.

Week's Contest Will Be Based On Maple Sugar

MAPLE SAP is running in Vermont, the "sugar bush," and New England farmers "sugaring off" the 1937 crop predict a good supply. This is good news for housewives seeking desserts in keeping with the spring spirit.

This week The Post Recipe Contest is for uses maple syrup and maple sugar. The five cash prizes for this contest are $3 for first prize, $2 for second prize and $1 for each of the remaining three prizes.

Maple syrup and maple sugar are available throughout the year, but in the spring time the flavor seems more delicious. Maple is a time-tested ingredient of frozen desserts but is used for other foods as well. You may enjoy maple parfait, maple cream, maple buns, maple-flavored rice, maple candy, maple pudding, maple nut pie or maple tapioca cream. Or you may prefer maple syrup and whipped cream with oranges, maple mousse or mock maple Spanish cream or maple cake frosting.

If you have a pet recipe using maple as a constituent, type or write it neatly and send it to Rebekah Blake, The Post Food Editor, in time for it to reach her not later than Saturday noon. Be sure that you write your name and address clearly on your recipe.

Only one recipe will be accepted from each contestant.

EASTER RECIPES

Special Easter dishes were featured in The Post recipe contest of last week. Judging from the results, Easter meals in and around Washington will be feasts, especially prepared for this season.

Baked Easter Lily Ham.

Place a 10-pound ham in a covered roaster with 2 cups of water and bake in 325 degrees F. oven 21 minutes per pound. Skin the ham when done, score, dot with cloves and brown for 20 minutes uncovered in hot 400 degrees F., basting with juice of one orange, one lemon and one cup of sugar mixed.

To make lilies, cut medium, crosswise slices of turnips. Fold outer edges of one slice together at bottom. Now insert a long strip of raw carrot for the center of lily. Then wrap a second slice of turnip around the bottom of the first slice and insert a toothpick through all to hold together, thus forming a lily.

Place ham on platter and decorate with the lilies. Serve nests of buttered green beans filled with mock Easter eggs of cooked and buttered carrots and potato balls. This makes a delicious Easter dinner, as well as an ornamental one.

MRS. J. H. KING,
1632 Thirty-fifth street northwest.

Potato Ducks.

4 baked potatoes
4 small carrots
1 tablespoon butter
Milk, salt and pepper.

Scrape carrots; cut in half lengthwise; wash and boil in small amount of water until tender. Remove from cooking vessel and brush with butter.

Cut hot freshly baked potatoes in half lengthwise, carefully remove potatoes from skins. Add butter, salt and pepper and mash potatoes until all lumps are removed. Add milk and beat until potatoes are light and fluffy. Reserve eight tablespoons of mashed potatoes and fill skins with remainder, allowing them to form small fluffy mounds.

In each mound place slantwise a carrot half to form the duck's bill. Place a teaspoon of the reserved mashed potato at the point where the carrot has entered the mound. This makes the duck's head. Celery seed may be used for eyes, but this is not necessary. These ducks may be prepared the day before they are to be used, stored in the refrigerator, and then heated in the oven about 10 minutes before serving time. A blue or green platter makes an excellent lake upon which to serve the ducks.

MRS. G. P. CREGGER,
Box 298, Warrenton, Va.

Easter-Egg Salad.

1 cup cottage cheese, colored red
1 cup Philadelphia cheese, colored green (2 packages)
1 cup grated carrots
1 cup—yolks of 5 hard-boiled eggs

Cut hard-boiled eggs in half, remove whites carefully, cut into rings. Shred cabbage and mix with salad dressing, salt and pepper. Mash cottage cheese with a fork. Add salt and mayonnaise dressing to make a paste, add enough coloring to make deep red. Roll into 4 balls. Prepare the cream cheese in the same manner, adding green coloring instead of red.

Add salt and mayonnaise to grated carrots, roll into 4 balls. Mash yolks well. Add salt and mayonnaise and form into 4 balls.

Place cold shredded cabbage on a plate. Put a ring of egg whites on the cabbage (four rings to each plate). Place one of each colored eggs in ring. Have four colored "eggs," one of each color, on a plate. Place two olives or two small pickles in the center of a plate. Serve cold with crackers.

MRS. WILLIAM HARALSON,

Arlington, Va.

Easter Bunny Cake.

4 eggs
1½ cup sugar
2 cups cake flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup boiling water
1 teaspoon lemon extract.

Beat eggs until very light. Beat in sugar, a little at a time, then the flour, sifted, with salt and baking powder. Add boiling water, a small amount at a time, and the flavoring. Put into a large ungreased angel cake pan. Bake in a slow oven for about 1 hour, starting at 250 degrees F. and increasing to 350 degrees F. Frost when cold.

Frosting.

1½ cups confectioners' sugar
2 tablespoons milk
2 tablespoons butter
½ teaspoon almond extract
Green coloring.

Moisten sugar with milk, add flavoring, mix and beat, spread on top and sides of cake, saving a small amount of icing. Add melted butter to this and color a delicate green. Use it to decorate the rim of the cake, allowing it to drip over the edge to resemble grass. Make bunnies with large, fresh marshmallows, pinching with thumb and finger at one end for nose and at the other for the tail. Dip toothpicks in melted chocolate and make dots for eyes. Large ears are cut from white writing paper. Arrange a row of those bunnies around edge of the cake while frosting is still soft.

On a bed of lettuce place a half of a pear. Use cottage cheese or cream cheese rolled into a ball for the head and an almond for the beak. Take the white of a hard-boiled egg, cut into eighths for the feet, an allspice for the eye, and you may place a small piece of celery on for the tail of the animal.

South Favors Ham and Eggs As Easter Dish

Day Has Traditional Food Such as 'Pasche Eggs' and Tansy Cakes.

By Elisabeth E. Poe.

EVEN as Christmas and Thanksgiving, Easter has its own food traditions, the most notable of these being the custom of eating "pasche eggs," the gay, dyed eggs so dear to the hearts of little children. In this section there is a variant to this practice in the form of broiled ham and eggs for Easter morning breakfast.

The eggs may be prepared in any style, hard boiled, fried, poached or scrambled. But the ham, to be true to the traditions of Dixie, must be prepared as follows:

Broiled Ham.

1 slice ham
1 cup milk
1 cup water

Trim all skin from ham and soak in the water and milk for about one hour. Wipe well and place on broiler rack and put under slow flame. Broil slowly and when cooked and slightly browned remove from rack and place on hot platter.

Naturally some form of hot bread is imperative with such a breakfast. If there is a complaisant cook how about Miss Lee's Southern corn bread with your Easter breakfast?

Make it as follows:

¾ cup flour
1 tablespoon sugar
¾ cup milk
¾ cup corn meal
1-3 teaspoon salt
3 teaspoons baking powder
2 tablespoons melted bacon fat.

Mix the cornmeal, flour and baking powder, then add the other ingredients, beat well and bake in a well-greased shallow pan, in a hot oven for approximately 20 minutes. Leftover pieces may be split, buttered, and browned in the oven.

The happy practice of carrying tansy cakes at Easter to give to each person met survives in many parts of England. Sometimes the parish clerk takes the cakes to every family under the jurisdiction of that particular church. Usually such cakes are about the eighth of an inch thick, and of two sizes, the larger being 7 or 8 inches, the smaller about 5 in diameter. The tansy cakes are symbolical of the bitter herbs commanded at the Paschal feast. In the early days of Christian England after church services were over games were played, a fact perpetuated in the following old ballad:

"At stool-ball, Lucia, let us play,
For sugar, cakes, or wine;
Or for a tansy let us pay,
The loss be thine or mine.
If thou, my dear, a winner be,
At trundling of the ball,
The wager thou shalt have, and me
And my misfortunes all."

The tansy, an herb, is dedicated to St. Athanasius. The tansy was a favorite dish in the eighteenth century and some one has written of it: "It was as inseparable from a bill of fare for Easter as roast goose at Michaelmas, or a gooseberry tart at Witsun."

Gay Novelties In Ice Cream Are Available

EASTER DINNER is certainly a grand occasion to parade your smartest table decorations—your daintiest and most appetizing dishes. The dessert, particularly, lend itself to novel and attractive innovations.

This year the ice cream people have outdone themselves with fascinating ice cream novelties—that are a treat just to look at—and not expensive either. One that makes a proud piece de resistance is a delightful Easter bunny that will bring squeals of pleasure from the children—and a more restrained approval from their elders.

There is also a large and beautifully decorated Easter egg. Or, if you prefer, an exciting choice of individual fancy molds. All the Easter traditions are represented—dainty Easter eggs, cunning little bunnies and perky little chicks.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

"What to Do?" Asks Man Who Believes His Reason Is Threatened by Loss of Girl's Love.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Seven years ago, at the age of 17, I fell in love with a girl who returned my love, only to a much more heightened degree. In fact, several times she threatened self-destruction if anything happened to me or my love for her. She led me to believe her love was undying and that no one had ever loved another as she loved me. However, through indifference and neglect I managed to kill her love. Understand, I loved her constantly and dearly and in important crises was always at her side. But I did not bestir myself to the little gallantries so many women crave. Why, I do not know, unless it be as someone said, "What men desire most, they destroy."

• • • •

Naturally, about two years ago she handed me my walking papers. These I accepted quite calmly; serene and confident in the knowledge that a love so great as hers could not really die. For one solid year, I waged a campaign for recapturing her. But to no avail. A year after her love for me had died, she became engaged to another. My problem now is not how to win her back. That, I realize, is hopeless. Even when I was seriously ill she refused to communicate with me. And supposing I did merit a second chance and could convince her of it, it would not be fair to her or her fiance to intrude myself at this late date.

• • • •

My problem is: What shall I do about myself? When her engagement was first announced I recalled to mind the apothegm, "Time heals everything," and sat back on my heels to await the pleasant erasures of the hourglass. However, Father Time marched backward instead and my longing for the lady became an obsession and then a mania. I earnestly believe my death-bed desire for her will be just as stanch as it is today.

• • • •

Being naturally a coward I sought respite in alcohol. This seemed to turn the trick at first. I could laugh heartily and mean it and what was more, I could sleep untroubled. But after a while it had just the opposite effect. I would become morbid in my cups and her image before my eyes became accented. Thus ended the second lesson.

• • • •

Many times after particularly hectic days and sleepless nights, I very seriously contemplated suicide. Believe me when I say the withholding factor was the crumb of comfort I derive just from living in the same world with her. I read somewhere that "the cure for a woman is another woman," so I tried that. I did meet some personable young ladies. But with one exception I found myself comparing them to the object of my frustrated love, and they were woefully lacking. The exception just managed to have enough of the other's mannerisms to make me miserable with memories in her presence and I soon stopped seeing her.

• • • •

I am indifferent to everything. My work with the Government suffers to the point where I may not be tolerated much longer. I have not visited my family, who live only a short distance from here, for eight months. In fact, I barely correspond with them. Please do not interpret the above citations as evidence of self-pity, for I have made strong attempts to break my lethargy. I realize just what is wrong but am helpless to correct it. I'm afraid. Now and then I try to revive my interest in literary work and seem to snap out of it for a short time, but invariably I soon slump. A psychiatrist would probably diagnose my case as manic-depressive psychose but I doubt if that would apply for even such patients have their moments of self-exhilaration and glee. This never occurs to me.

• • • •

I sincerely wonder if you can suggest a remedy. I am sure that such aberrations, if continued, will induce insanity. Thank you

ICARUS.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR ICARUS: The cure for such sickness of the soul, and there is a cure, will be found in hard manual labor which brings healthful sweat to the brow and real fatigue to the body; in work done close to the soil with the great out-of-doors as the amphitheater of one's efforts and the sun as the source of light. When a fevered mind and a tortured soul threaten to dissever contact with reality, to lose all sense of direction and to surrender the will to live, it is time to return to the healing presence of Mother Nature. It is time to put aside books and bottles, regimented artificial distractions and routine mental labors; time to begin to function more as a physical entity than as a shrinking, quivering bundle of thought and nervous intuition. It is time to take a vacation from the unnatural treadmill of office work and hall bedroom living in a metropolis.

• • • •

By what route can you take this cure? Have you any influence which would net you a job as a seaman, fisherman, bridge-builder, forester, farmer, rancher or what-have-you. For that, my dear Icarus, is the answer to your problem; the thing to do about yourself. If such a program simply cannot be managed for economic reasons, then I advise you to arrange an office change of some kind. Maneuver a promotion, or change jobs, do anything which will throw you into a different environment with brand-new challenges to meet. And hurl yourself wholehearted, outside office hours, into some strenuous, muscle-building sport. Dedicate yourself to the ambition of becoming an amateur champion swimmer, golfer or tennis player, for instance. Literary work, so-called, is just about the worst possible hobby you could be pursuing at present. M. H.

New Evening Gowns Merge Many Colors

Paris (U.P.).—Three or four harmonizing colors are combined in almost all of the new evening dresses in the Lucien Lelong collection.

One of the most successful of these gowns is in dull orange taffeta banded on the wide skirt with a wide stripe of white edged on either side in purple. The evening dress has a tightly fitted, high-waisted bodice which has a halter neck that leaves the shoulders bare.

Men Should Vie With Fairer Sex In Easter Parade

If your wife or sweetheart is arrayed glamorously it is up to you to enhance the picture, rather than detract from it. Your outfit should be a pleasing background and foil for the feminine finery, and should be chosen in the same theme as hers.

For instance, if she is wearing a softly tailored suit with simple accessories you can appear as a smart escort, attired in a business suit and felt hat. The color, to keep the duet in perfect harmony, need not match her ensemble, but it likewise shouldn't clash.

If your woman companion is dressed in formal daytime attire you should choose formal daytime clothes, too, or the effect will be incongrous and definitely one-sided. This means striped trousers, a tail coat, top hat, boutonniere and cane. This same outfit will be appropriate to accompany a woman wearing the "dressy" type of costume, now popular for afternoon wear.

Following the current vogue for color in the man's wardrobe, Easter would be an appropriate time to introduce gay colors into your designs for smart dressing. Suits, shirts, ties and hats for the male in the 1937 manner have gone colorful and, in the high-fashion trends, complicated in styling. To be original and daring, your outfit could vie with that of the feminine side of the family for attention.

Quaintly charming, yet the last word in modern styling, the ensemble above is a direct steal from "bicycle" fashions of the gay 90's. Navy blue wool with a tiny black velvet collar fashions the feminized suit, topped by a dark navy malecon straw sailor, trimmed with starched white organdie. The white blouse with lace-edged jabot and double lace ruffles falling over the hands is the piece de resistance of the entire costume.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

"MEDICINE MARCHES ON" is the title of a review of advances lately reported in medical science. They are:

A new skin disinfectant, several times as powerful as carbolic acid which is the standard disinfectant, was discovered at the University of Illinois. It is a compound colored alcoholic solution of mercuric chloride. Used in several hundred emergency and surgical cases, it was found that no infections followed its use and that it was non-irritating.

Intramuscular injections of liver extract have prepared for surgical operation patients whose resistance, as determined by the number of white blood cells, was low. The liver extract apparently stimulated the bone marrow to produce more white blood cells.

Certain skin disorders are benefited by mental hygiene. So says Dr. John H. Stokes of the University of Pennsylvania. To cure such disorders, the patient must observe six principles, namely, temporary repudiation of responsibility, discipline and self-analysis, re-education in personal detachment, detecting and releasing muscular tension, finding ways to discharge muscular retention, and invocation of a sense of the ridiculous.

New uses for castor oil presented by Dr. Winfield Scott Pugh of New York. He says that castor oil is of great value in irritable colon and colitis. It is a detoxicant in burns and an evacuant in urinary sepsis.

Cobra venom has been used for the relief of unbearable pain. Its advantages over morphine and other opiates are that it is not habit-forming and does not produce the disagreeable by-effects.

The cause of ulcer of the stomach has been studied by Dr. Alton Ochner He believes that ulcers result primarily from a pre-disposition to the disease, consisting in a tissue susceptibility in the lesser curvature of the stomach. Too much acidity is almost certain to be one of the general causes of ulcers. Eating, drinking and smoking habits must be carefully controlled to avoid the formation of ulcers. Excessive use of tobacco on an empty stomach is especially dangerous.

Sea foods containing iodine and the milk of cows pastured in regions where the soil contains iodine are efficient goiter preventives, according to Dr. Row E. Remington, of the University of South Carolina. From his study the doctor has concluded that the iodine of marine fish, shell fish and milk from goiter-free regions is equal, but not superior, to the use of iodized salt, as judged by its ability to maintain normal thyroid glands.

Sleekness Bows to Loveliness In This Year's Easter Parade

By Ethel Ehlen,
The Post Fashion Editor.

NOT SINCE the "turn of the century" have clothes for the Easter parade of fashions been so delightfully feminine and dressy. Even the most tailored suit has been feminized and glorified by frills of some kind, or topped by a hat bedecked with flowers, ribbon bows or other furbelows. This Easter Sunday will be an occasion for dressing up, in the literal sense of the term.

• • • •

For numberless seasons, an Easter outfit has meant not much more perhaps than a corsage to add glamour to the winter fur coat, augmented by a hat of conservative selection. The clothes have been responsible for this attitude to a large degree—they have been simple, tailored and unobstrusive, both in styling and color. This spring America has gone romantic, and is expressing this new trend in complicated clothes stressing feminity and youthfulness. Color is rampant in the mode, and clothes have rhythm, verve and life; the aim tomorrow will be loveliness instead of the former austere sleekness.

• • • •

This revolutionary change in clothes extends throughout the entire wardrobe, from the exceedingly feminine and dressy hats, to the dressmaker touches in the new footwear. In fact, if one is fastidious, hats, gloves, shoes and handbag will echo the smart detail utilized in the styling and trimming of the costume. For instance, piping, stitching and color contrasts, which give a frock or suit distinction, are repeated in all the accessories.

• • • •

Gloves have gone glamorous, and instead of the more sombre and conventional colors, hands will appear in the Easter style pageant tomorrow in gay hues and tints, rivaling the spring flowers in color tones. The Easter bonnet should be taken literally this season—picturesque bonnets with under-chin ties and posies peeping out from under brims, are among the most important of the spring millinery influences. Dresses have lowered, feminine necklines instead of the high, severe versions of fall and winter. Gay prints are everywhere; skirts are short and flaring.

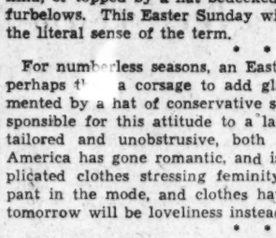
• • • •

Coats inspired by the costume of the ballet dancer are cut in numerous gores to swing and flare gracefully when one is walking; others, of more conservative cut, are trimmed with the old-fashioned bengaline or grosgrain, and flaunt fascinating back fullness. Suits are softly styled in direct contrast to the mannish tailored versions of last season. Jewelry is worn with costumes of all types, and for all occasions; quaint brooches, numerous bracelets, earrings, clips and pins.

PLEASANT HOMES

"NO, MY DEAR, it's not your nerves that are frayed, but your room. Get up and buy some new curtains, maybe a rug, too." Now that's what a lot of doctors should perscribe we're sure.

Because nothing will cure a case of nerves quicker than a change of scenery. When the Riviera or Yellowstone aren't possible, try something refreshing in the house.



Justine did that when she got so in the dumps after her winter flu. Oh, she grew very bold with her paper and paint. She wanted a silver ground wall paper with white flowers sprawling all over it . . . but it was too expensive. Finally though she decided to use this paper on one wall of the room only, then paint the other three walls in lemon yellow with the ceiling in white. Wasn't that delightful to begin with! For the floor she got a gray chenille rug and had her ivory furniture (which was nice but dated) refinished in gray. On the bed, placed against the wall papered wall, she used a quilted spread of yellow crepe de chine, while the windows, in the painted walls, were hung with silver grey satin, which is also used for the dressing table petticoat. The two small upholstered chairs are in yellow, as is the dressing table bench. Wouldn't a smart setting like that stand any lady up on her toes!

Of course, it's on the formal side. If you need a change but don't want to spend so much for the rejuvenations, try Marietta's recipe for a spring effect in a room—light green walls, green rag rugs, floral chintz draperies and spread predominantly aquamarine with pleated ruffles in a good clear shade of lavender. Now, we ask you, wouldn't that look as sweet as an Easter bonnet?

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, March 26.

WHATEVER the state of the weather, spring always gets off to a spanking start among our limestone canyons, where a blade of grass hasn't been seen since 1894. The minute the vernal equinox checks in, so does our annual flower show at Grand Central Palace on Lexington avenue — and Nature-hungry citizens wander gapingly among four and a half (count 'em) acres of gorgeous blooms. You can smell—but mustn't touch!

ALICE HUGHES.

This is one local shennanigan where the hired help runs things. The rich folk step into the background, only emerging to clutch their blue ribbons, while their gardeners take full charge of judging the posies and the entire gardens laid out indoors. The fabulously wealthy Mrs. Payne Whitney has a formal garden in the show this year, designed and tended lovingly by Henning Michelson, her devoted weeder. It features huge tulips, with a background of flowering dogwood and young birches. G. H. Gillies, who toils in the soil for the present Mrs. Marshall Field, has concentrated on a bed of tea-roses, ringed with yellow and pink azaleas.

• • • •

These lads, and a dozen other big-shot gardeners, form the jury which passes out the prizes. The show fills no less than four big floors of the Palace with color and nice whiffs. Of course, there are the usual new varieties of roses on view. I like particularly a big "Queen Mary"—a pinkish beauty. But the thing that gives me the greatest kick in our posy exhibit is the fact that the boys who know their blooms and do the heavy work are the ones who pass on the flowers. This flower show is serious business —not for dilettantes!

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Well, Fifth and Madison avenues are the customary shambles today, with the wild-eyed girls skittering from shop to shop lining up the last ducky touches for their perfect ensembles. And may the good old sun shine down on those new suits. . . . What do you want in the way of flowers? Are you a gardenia girl, or are you satisfied with nothing less than a cluster of decadent-looking orchids? I'm all for camellias, myself, though I don't presume to compete with "Swede" Garbo. Prices here have been nicely boosted, and by tonight the florists will be yelling for more stock . . .

• • • •

Local women are anxiously awaiting the coming film, "Vogues of 1938," which will deal with feminine frippery in a big way never yet seen in pictures. Lillian Fisher, former Harper's Bazaar editor in Paris, has charge of the clothes angle.

Our doctors keep fighting the too-high maternity death rate in this town, and today report they have knocked 10 per cent off the tragic total. Good work, boys! . . . Our big-league milliner, peppery Lily Dache, is going to open a four-floor salon in an old brownstone-front next summer, and she tells me a cute stunt for her cornerstone laying. Into the tin box she will put a copy of what she remembers as the first hat she ever designed and what she considers the best topper she's made in 1937! That'll be a novel cornerstone! . . . And a happy Easter to you, too. . . . . .

Tell Fortunes at Parties

TURN CARD TOSS into a jolly fortune-telling game and steer your party clear of the doldrums.

Get ten stiff cards, write a fortune on each. New Job, Trip Soon, Legacy, Love, Fame, are a few you could use.

Each player sits in a chair 10 feet from a hat on the floor. The cards he flips into it tell what's in store for him.

After this muscle-warmer your guests will love a brain-teaser like "G-Men." Joe's It. He figures out a complicated murder plot, taking ideas from detective stories or movies if his imagination's not lively. But he tells only one fact. "Pat Jones was murdered in Forest Park."

Joe can answer only "yes" or "no" to questions the crowd fires at him. "Was he drowned in the fish pond?" "Was he hanged from the oak tree?" The object is to find out when, how, why, by whom the foul deed was done.

Take your tips on party games and food from our 40-page booklet, "Good Parties," and your party will be long remembered. Grand ideas for home, school, club and church parties.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "Good Parties," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Miss Perkins Backs Eviction Of Sit-Downers

Says Court Orders Should Be Obeyed; Roosevelt Parley Today.

manding Federal action to end sit-down strikes and asserting "armed insurrection is spreading like wildfire."

Congressional leaders repeatedly have intimated during the last week that no direct legislative action could be taken by Congress with specific reference to sit-down strikes, and have indicated too much stress has been laid directly on prospective results of the conference at the White House today.

Supreme Court Blamed.

Administration leaders have placed the blame on the Supreme Court, holding that labor has resorted to the sit-downs because it has been unable to achieve its ends under the Wagner labor relations act because some employers refuse to comply with the act, since the court has not ruled on its constitutionality.

Opposition leaders, opposing the President's court program, have answered this argument by charges that it serves as a "smoke-screen," and have charged John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, is "dictating to the President."

The Labor Department released figures yesterday revealing that while 790,000 persons participated in strikes throughout the whole of 1936, 435,000 have already been on strike in the first two months of this year.

The President, reported by The Associated Press to be tanned and vigorous from his vacation at Warm Springs, also will face the relief problem on his return. He will soon start work on a message to Congress proposing the work-relief appropriation for the next fiscal year, beginning July 1.

Keen Interest Shown.

Keen interest already is being expressed on the details of this message, as an indication of whether the Administration soon will begin to curtail its spending program.

In her letter to McCormack, Miss Perkins said:

"Your statement on the floor of the House yesterday that 'a few weeks ago the Secretary of Labor expressed doubt as to whether or not the sit-down strike was legal or illegal' is a misinterpretation of a remark, taken out of its context, a misinterpretation which was widely circulated before you made it and I am taking this opportunity to put the record straight.

"During the early days of the labor dispute in the General Motors I said, in response to a question at a press conference, that I thought the officials of the General Motors were unwise and failing in their public responsibilities by refusing outright to meet and discuss the issues and grievances involved with the representatives of those aggrieved and their principal adviser. There was ample evidence that such a prompt meeting and discussion would have ended the sit-down strikes in that industry and probably the so-called 'epidemic' in the area. An informal question was asked as to 'whether or not the fact that the strikers were illegally sitting down justified the officials of General Motors in their refusal to meet them.' I replied that in my opinion it did not. That the function of General Motors was to make automobiles and to that end to conduct its relations with its workers in such a way as to make possible the regular performance of that function—that any error or even misbehavior on the part of those workers did not impose on the company the duty of judging and punishing the offense nor relieve them from public responsibility of talking with representatives about their grievances. Their remedy in this respect, I added, was to ask the public authorities and the courts to make a determination of the propriety and legality of the actions of their fellow citizens who worked for General Motors. I said as an aside in what was a rather long informal conversation: 'The legality of this sit-down method has not yet been determined by the courts.' It was, of course, a statement of fact and no opinion was asked or given on a point which is in the jurisdiction of the courts and legislative bodies exclusively."

Courts Have Acted.

"Since that time the Michigan courts have taken final action in ordering the evacuation of plants and I have never questioned that these decrees were within the competent jurisdiction of these courts. Nor should disobedience to these orders be counseled by any Government official.

"The courts are an instrumentality established by the people themselves as a method agreed upon by citizens in a democracy as a practical way of settling civil disputes among the people. It is necessary to have and sustain such a method in order that we may live together in a free democracy.

"I think that it is the duty of the Secretary of Labor to point out the problems, purposes and intentions, as well as the conditions, of the wage earners of the United States of America, so far as these are understood or expressed. So I think it is my duty to say that careful inquiry indicates that the sit-down strikes do not reflect any widespread movement to defy the law or impair civil government or change current conceptions of property rights. The objectives are the usual objectives of unions in labor disputes."

Refers to Report.

"Your remarks in the House also refer to a report in the New York Times of March 25. I think perhaps the article has been incorrectly reported to you, for certainly I have not said, nor was it stated in that article that I said, that the 'economic aspects of the sit-down strike place it in the category of picketing.'

"I was asked in a press conference on March 24 what were the economic consequences of the sit-down strikes. I replied and differentiated the true economic result from the social situation surrounding it. I said 'that the economic consequences were the same as in any stoppage of work, namely, no production, no wages, no sales, etc. Serious, but no different from the economic result of any stoppage. The situations and considerations surrounding the sit-down method are different and are what make it a grave problem and one that is a subject of concern to all who think about it or are in touch with it.'

"I refer to its relation to the law of trespass—the possibilities of abuse in a number of ways—the hazard of lack of discipline—the interference with orderly processes of adjustment."

"I have written you at length, sir, and with deep respect for your views and opinions in this most puzzling situation, but I am glad of this opportunity of stating accurately the position I was reported to have taken.

"In connection with the Michigan situation it must be recognized that Gov. Murphy has had extremely difficult problems in the field of industrial relations confronting him since he took office and he is to be congratulated for solving them in a peaceful way in the public interest and in that of all the disputants. His firmness shows that State officials, who alone have regulatory authority in such situations as confronted Michigan, can solve such difficult problems in the public interest by the rule of reason.

"The action of the United Automobile Workers in vacating the Chrysler plants shows that responsible leaders can and will comply with court rulings on private property rights."

Recognition Grows.

"The recent success of the conference method of settling of labor differences indicates that collective bargaining is becoming more and more recognized by far-seeing industrialists as the proper and advantageous way of dealing with their employes when differences arise. Costly strikes and lockouts can be avoided, industrial relations stabilized, and the mutual practice of responsibility and good discipline promoted by the continued and growing use of the collective bargaining principle as set forth in the national labor relations act and other Federal labor statutes."

Six other prominent Bostonians signed the Lowell message, which said that if small minorities can seize and hold property "by violence and threatened bloodshed, then freedom and liberty are at an end, Government becomes a mockery, superseded by anarchy, mob rule and ruthless dictatorship."

President Roosevelt, meanwhile, still silent on the sit-down strike situation, headed North last night, with arrival at the White House set for this morning just before noon.

At 5 p. m. he will meet a delegation of Congressional leaders, including Garner, Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, majority leader; Speaker William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, and Representative Sam Rayburn, of Texas, House floor leader.

To Consider Strikers.

This conference, it has been announced, will consider sit-down strikes as well as other matters.

The telegram from the citizens of Boston was the latest addition to the rising tide of demands in and out of Congress for Federal intervention in the use of the latest labor technique.

Vice President Garner, who received the telegram, said he would place it before the Senate Monday. It put much of the responsibility for the wave of sit-down strikes on the President, saying:

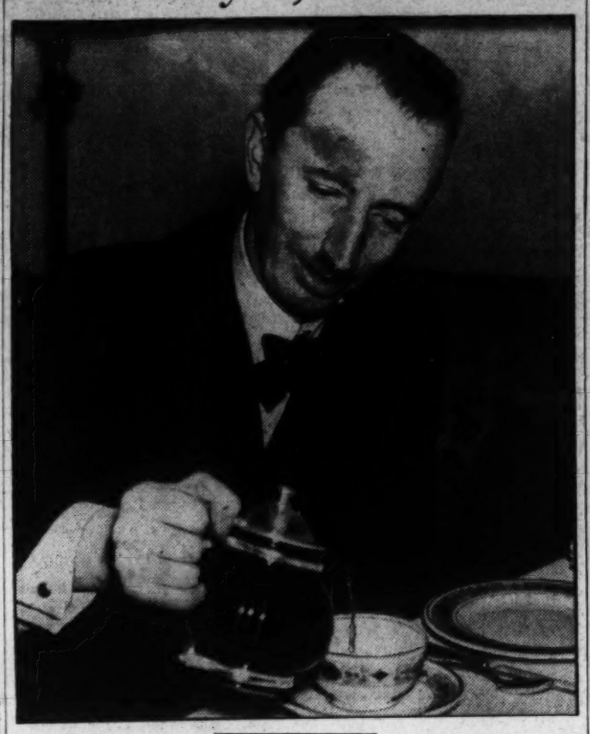
"Armed insurrection—defiance of law, order and duly elected authority—is spreading like wildfire.

"It is rapidly growing beyond control. What determined action by the Governor of Michigan several weeks ago, or a few words of counsel by the President, would have ended summarily, now challenges the supremacy of government itself."

The signers included the following:

Paul E. Fitzpatrick, 58-year-old wholesale dry goods corporation head and insurance company director; Edmund W. Longley, 74, director of banks and insurance companies, and former telephone company official; M. L. Madden, of Brookline; James L. Richards, 79, retired financier, director of numerous utilities, railroads, banks and corporations; Bernard J. Rothwell, 78, manufacturer, corporation director and clubman, and Dr. David D. Schannell, of Boston.

Spain May Plunge Civilization Into Cataclysm, Asserts Phelan



International Labor Office Leader, Here for Textile Conference, Sees Strife-Torn Republic as World Danger Spot.

Spain is a danger spot that may fire the whole world and plunge civilization into cataclysm.

That view was expressed yesterday by Edward J. Phelan, assistant director of the International Labor Office, here for the first world textile conference, which convenes April 2.

Phelan, who attended the first I. L. O. conference held here in 1919, labeled the reported agreement between Britain and France to halt the flow of foreign troops into Spain the most significant step yet taken to localize the Spanish civil strife.

"When I left Europe the situation was distinctly better than it has been for some time," he said. "I don't think there is any immediate danger of general warfare unless some grave or unforeseen incident takes place."

That "incident" may be Spain, he admitted, though he denied all Europe is a divided house with two warring camps.

"There is no definite issue between fascism and democracy," he said. "If war breaks out, of course, such an alignment may be possible."

The International Labor Office official said he was impressed by the "awareness of social problems" that now exist in the United States. He stated that the stem on foreign immigration was a contributing factor to this birth of social consciousness.

"Americans who were dissatisfied with their lot could always heed the advice "Go West, young man," he said. "Now, there is no West to go to native labor is affected, and idleness consequently causes thought-provoking analysis."

Commenting on the issue of free trade versus tariffs, Phelan had this much to say:

"World economic conditions still are in a chaotic state in spite of recovery, but future prosperity probably may be secured by an organized attempt to reconcile justified economic self-sufficiency with the maximum respect for world needs."

Southern R. R. Planning Order Of $14,000,000

of manufacturing entering the South, where native non-union labor is available, and where vast natural resource reserves are being opened up, such as coal in Virginia, Tennessee and other States, iron in Alabama and cheap electricity in numerous Southern mountain regions.

While the picture of Southern Railroad's future is brighter today than it was in 1928, an examination of the road's financial position shows that it still is saddled with an unusually heavy funded indebtedness, amounting to $273,292,000 (exclusive of RFC loans in the amount of $19,610,000, of which only $282,672 has been repaid). Yet the debt, everything included, is less than in 1929.

Troubles Pictured.

A better picture of Southern's woes during the depression is shown by the fact it had a big deficit in February, 1935, and suffered an unbroken run of losses straight through to October, 1935. In eight months it lost three and a quarter million dollars, which was piled onto its large existing deficit.

In October of that year the tide turned, and a half million profit was reported. Throughout 1936 conditions continued favorable, with the company out of the red by a safe margin, but it was not until June that the big upswing began. A profit of $11,000 in May became $222,000 in June, and the figures mounted as high as $860,000 for October, 1936.

What sort of business is the Southern getting which has justified an investment of $14,000,000 in new equipment and the spectacular rise in stock values? About 82 per cent of the road's income is derived from freight, a good deal of which in the last few months has been made up of automobiles, radios, furniture, etc., going into the South again for the first time in years, in exchange for Southern produce such as cotton, tobacco and coal.

New business pointing to the industrialization of the South includes materials for the $30,000,000 dam at Chattanooga, materials for a new U. S. Steel mill, for a new Montgomery-Ward plant and the Tennessee Coal & Iron plant, which eventually will increase coal and other tonnages. The outgoing Southern lumber business is booming, with demand exceeding flatcar capacities.

New Competition.

While the South's purchasing power has revived as a result of government measures, Southern Railway at the same time has suffered from a new form of competition, the truck. A great deal of the high-class, heavy revenue freight from the Southeastern region has been diverted into truck transportation, but the offset has been slight, and is of less consequence now than during depression. Manufactured goods make up 32 per cent of Southern tonnage and bring in 54 per cent of the revenue.

Floods did not seriously affect Southern's business. The January, 1937, gross revenues were up 8 per cent over 1936. An increase in business along the Ohio River may be felt soon as a result of the floods, as new building materials and other necessities are shipped in to replace flood-ruined buildings, roads, telegraph lines, home furnishings, etc.

President of Southern Railroad, with its 12 subsidiaries, is Fairfax Harrison, who formerly was solicitor for the road and rose steadily from 1903 in that job to the presidency in 1913.

The nucleus of the system, which spreads from Washington to Atlanta to Jacksonville to Mobile to Cincinnati, with many intervening small lines, was the old Richmond & Danville line, incorporated in 1847.

Security Act Taken To Supreme Court

By the Associated Press.

The Alpha Portland Cement Co. and 203 other persons and firms filed with the Supreme Court yesterday a new attack on constitutionality of provisions of the Federal social security act taxing employers for the aid of the unemployed.

Counsel for the petitioners asked Justice Cardozo to grant an injunction restraining the collector of internal revenue for the Alabama district from collecting the taxes. They argued that the petition for a review of a judgment against them by the Fifth Circuit Court could not be acted upon in time to prevent making a return and paying taxes by March 31.

Justice Cardozo referred the injunction request to the full court membership. It may be acted upon Monday.

President May Cruise Again This Summer

New Bedford, Mass., March 26 (AP). George Brodeur, superintendent of a Fairhaven boat yard, today said that instructions he had received from the owner of the schooner Sewanna indicated that President Roosevelt would cruise New England waters again this summer.

Brodeur said Harrison Tweed, of New York, owner of the boat, informed him he had virtually completed arrangements with James Roosevelt, son of the President, for chartering the schooner for the coming season.

D. C. Supply Bill Study Postponed

House consideration of the 1938 District supply bill was postponed yesterday by majority leaders from Tuesday until Thursday of next week.

Under plans disclosed yesterday, District day will be observed Monday, the legislative appropriation bill will be considered Tuesday and Wednesday, and the District supply bill on Thursday and Friday.

The District bill has been ready for House action more than a week, but national appropriations bills have been given priority.

Carrying approximately $47,500,000, the bill does not differ greatly from the budget submitted by the President except in the allocation of funds among the departments.

Bob Burns Says

Hollywood is supposed to be the headquarters of romance, but my idea of real romance is the kind we have down home.

One actor out here had gone with so many girls that he had a name for bein' fickle. When he went in to buy the engagement ring, the jeweler thought "Well at last he's found the right girl." He was sure of it when the boy told him to engrave on the ring "To My Darling Louise."

Then the boy asked how soon he could get the ring and the jeweler told him it would take two weeks. The boy thought a while and then he says: "Well, maybe you'd jest better engrave 'To My Darling.'"

Christ's Funeral Reenacted by Franciscans

Franciscan Monks Re-enact Funeral Procession of Jesus

Hundreds Crowd Monastery for Portrayal of Scenes at Mount Calvary; Easter Story Related by Priest.

Rich and poor, white and colored, walked or rode to the Franciscan Monastery last night to form a common brotherhood of sorrow and hope in witness to a portrayal of the funeral procession of Jesus Christ that was performed, in annual custom, by the Franciscan Community.

They entered the monastery out of a night that was cold for the season to jam to both seating and standing capacity the incensed-filled edifice. Then, for an hour and a half, they witnessed with emotions that left many of them weeping, the portrayal of Christ's followers removing the body from Calvary and heard from a black-robed priest the pronouncement of God's mercy, existing still in a world where sin was current.

Behind them, on a high balcony, whose steps were crowded with worshipers, they saw the figure of Christ on a cross, crucified between two thieves. They heard voices chanting of passion and, some turning in their seats, saw the procession begin. The monks walked slowly, with their hands in the gesture of prayer. They circled the auditorium.

In the procession's center four knights of Mount St. Sepulcher bore the waxen image of Christ, his hands, feet and side stained with blood. Acolytes bore the implements of his crucifixion, the nails, the spears and the crown of thorns. The procession passed the pews where some were kneeling, where some bowed their heads in prayer or meditation. The music, subdued, beat in a solemn march.

From the other end of the auditorium, his face dim in the outer light of the auditorium, Father Capstrain, of Rutherford, N. J., raised his robed right arm in a quieting gesture and for 20 minutes related the Easter story.

He wondered how men could reject the Savior who underwent incredible suffering for men; he recounted the costs of sin and the ultimate victories of right living; he recalled the passion of Christ on the Cross and urged men to its foot. He ended with his robed arms uplifted in supplication and from the auditorium below him swelled in a rising unison the Latin words of the "Te Deum."

Two knights of Mount St. Sepulcher walked to the stone and carried the figure into the sepulcher which symbolized the burial place. Seals were applied, to be removed Sunday morning.

The re-enactment of the funeral procession of Christ was ended at the only place it is observed in the United States.

300 Join Service In Franklin Park

While keen winds whipped the trees in Franklin Park yesterday, approximately 300 persons gathered at an improvised altar in the center of the park to participate in the Good Friday service conducted under auspices of the Catholic Evidence Guild of Washington.

The Rev. Charles A. Hart, professor of philosophy at Catholic University and moderator of the Catholic Evidence Guild, was in charge. Each of the 14 stations leading up to the Crucifixion were described with meditations, by the Rev. Hart, the Rev. Gerard Greenwald, O. M., Cap., Father John Maloney, of Toronto, Canada, and Father Leon Aycock, of Louisiana.

After 12 stations had been presented, Father Robert Slavin, O. P. preached on "The Seven Last Words of Our Lord," and a massed choir composed of seminarians from the various religious houses of Catholic University, chanted the requiem to accompany the Seven Last Words. The concluding two incidents of Christ's death were then described and meditated upon, with an accompanying requiem.

The bride's sister's widower will marry the bridegroom's brother's widow at Sacred Heart Church April 1, the bride (Mrs. Fenwick) and groom (Mr. Fenwick) disclosed yesterday.

The bride is Mrs. Josephine F. Fenwick, the former Josephine Fleury; her husband, Albert Fenwick, died several years ago. The groom is Frank Paul Fenwick, a widower since the death of his wife, the former Virginia Fleury, in 1935.

Since her husband's death, Mrs. Josephine Fleury Fenwick has operated a tea room on Connecticut avenue, near Dupont Circle. Shortly after his wife died, Frank Paul Fenwick went into partnership with his widowed sister-in-law in the Connecticut avenue tea room. Frank, jr., 18, will be best man at the wedding and his sister, Virginia, 21, maid of honor.

Among the guests will be Mr. and Mrs. George Fleury. Mrs. Fleury was Alice Fenwick, sister of Frank, sr., and the late Albert; George Fleury is a brother of the bride. Mrs. Josephine Fenwick, and the late Mrs. Virginia Fenwick.

Gilligan Sets April 8 to Quit School Board

Vice President's Resignation Is Accepted by Chief Justice Wheat.

Henry Gilligan, vice president of the Board of Education, yesterday announced his retirement from membership in that body as definite.

His resignation, effective April 8, has been formally accepted by Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat of the District Supreme Court, Gilligan said.

The veteran school trustee, who asked for retirement because of the pressure of other duties, requested that his resignation become effective the day after the next meeting of the school board on April 7.

"I have a few matters I'd like to take up before I leave," Gilligan said yesterday.

Wants Magazine Restored.

One of these matters pertains to the magazine Scholastic, which Gilligan wants restored to the approved list for public school use. The publication was banned from the classroom last fall when board members voted against it on charges of "pacifism." Gilligan voted for the ban, but said afterward he did not think the magazine should be barred permanently from the schools.

Gilligan indicated two weeks ago he would leave the board, explaining that a concern for his health made it necessary to "give up something." In addition to his duties as an attorney, he is an officer in the District Masonic order and is active in several business and civic associations.

The retiring trustee has been on the board 11 years—since July 1, 1926, when he was appointed to succeed Ernest Greenwood.

Term Expires in 1938.

His present term expires July 1, 1938. He served the board in several important capacities. For the last three years he has been vice president, and at the same time has been chairman of its legislative committee.

Considered one of the most liberal of board members, he has advocated repeal of the red rider, worked for revision of the teachers' rating sheets and strongly supported the board's policy of giving publicity to all meeitngs of the body. He was also influential in revising the health and physical education program in District schools, making physical education classes obligatory instead of elective.

Colored Man Gravely Wounded in Gun Fight

Police early today were seeking the gun weilder who shot and critically wounded Barrington Jefferson, 20, colored, of the 300 block I street southwest.

Jefferson was in Providence Hospital, a bullet wound in his abdomen. Police said the shooting climaxed an argument which took place on the corner of Fourth and E streets northwest last night.

Quick Action Is Predicted On Eye Bill

Copeland Says He Will Approve Measure to Cut Infant Blindness.

Legislation to Be Considered on House Floor on Monday.

Early passage of a bill to reduce blindness in infants in the District was forecast yesterday as Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York, stated that he would approve the bill as reported by the House District Committee.

Senator Copeland sent a copy of the bill to Dr. William Gerry Morgan, one of the sponsors of the bill, to obtain his approval before asking the Senate District Committee to report it.

He stated that he now wants eliminated the provision exempting faith healers and other religious sects from the provisions of the bill, although he asked that it be inserted when the measure was passed by the Senate two years ago.

The House District Committee has reported the bill favorably and placed it on the calendar for consideration in the House Monday.

The measure has been before Congress for several years. Although it previously was passed by the Senate, it never was reported out before by the House committee, partly because of the religious exemption amendment.

At a recent House sub-committee hearing, Health Officer George C. Ruhland and spokesmen for the District Medical Society urged approval of the bill, but with the exemption provision stricken. A representative of the Christian Science Church asked that it be retained.

The measure requires the health officer to furnish in suitable containers a 1 per cent solution of silver nitrate, or other preparation suitable for use as a prophylactic against inflammation of the eyes of a newborn child. Every physician, midwife, or other person in attendance at a child birth in the District will be required to administer the solution immediately upon delivery.

Sponsors of the legislation predict that it will reduce substantially the cases of infant blindness in the District.

T.B. Man Accused Of Driving Drunk

James Henry Harker, 28, whose testimony in 1931 resulted in jail sentences for several policemen in brutality cases, was arraigned in Police Court yesterday charged with driving while intoxicated.

When he appeared before Judge John P. McMahon, Harker pleaded not guilty and demanded a jury trial. His bond was set at $500. He gave his address at T. B., Md., Thursday night when arrested by Policemen H. M. Hilldrup and R. W. Smith on Bladensburg road northeast.

Harker charged several police with having beaten a housebreaking confession out of him in 1931. His complaint resulted in a grand jury investigation which resulted in several District patrolmen being sent to jail.

Mrs. Martin Johnson Arrives With Big Smile and Bad Cold

OSA (MRS. MARTIN) JOHNSON.

Osa (Mrs. Martin) Johnson brought a big smile and a bad cold to Washington yesterday in advance of her lecture for the National Geographic Society last night. She flashed the smile from her face and a handkerchief to her nose frequently during the afternoon in her room in the Mayflower Hotel; but the face, as animated as a jungle night, quieted when she told her reasons for a projected return to the jungles she blazed for 27 years with her husband.

There's no mystery in her desire to return alone to the jungles—such as an urge to keep a rendezvous with his spirit out there. She simply wants to do some unfinished work at photography, at the trapping of big game, to carry on from where she and her husband left off.

And, importantly, Osa Johnson doesn't like what she calls the artificial ways of civilized life. She doesn't like the noise of city streets and this routine of constantly picking up newspapers and reading of the crash of a big airliner, or the brewing of a strike, or of general mischief alive in the land. She says so, but without making comparisons on American and jungle life.

Such a comparison would be pretty vague, anyway, she feels; for after all, how could one go about comparing a jungle native—"I always looked on them as children"—she says, with a solid American citizen, or the ways of the jungle native's life with the everyday outlooks of a sovereign citizen here? But she has found much wholesome character in both the jungle native and his surroundings and, "everything's so healthful out there; you get up in the mornings and feel good and you don't have a cold."

Mrs. Johnson sits now in a wheel chair because her knee, injured in the plane crash that was fatal to her husband, hasn't healed. And while she sits she talks and out of the long skein of the narrative of adventure there flashes such as:

"Oh, the Duke and Duchess of York were with us for a few days in British East Africa. . . . They're the most marvelous couple I ever met . . . He is just as sweet and fine as he can be. . . . And she is so pretty; her pictures just don't do her justice at all. . . . Yes, some interesting people have been with us: George Dryden, George Eastman, Daniel E. Pomeroy. I may not go back out there—I'd rather go to Africa than anywhere else this time—until 1938; it's all indefinite; I have lectures and other things to do here, meanwhile. . . . Yes, the natives are astonished at their own likenesses on photographs we make of them; they laugh and say 'Isn't it pretty?'

"I think that of all of it I like the animals best; they're so unpredictable. . . . And those deer in Borneo; they're as plentiful as jack rabbits in Kansas. . . . Of all American life I dislike most those modernistic things. . . . And when I settle down it will be in an old house in some such place as Connecticut. . . . An old house, mind you, not a modernistic one. . . . An old house with a white picket fence around it."

Later, in Constitution Hall, motion pictures of the capture of a huge orang-outan weighing approximately 400 pounds, from the top of a 200-foot tree by means of nets and lassoes, featured the showing of films made in Borneo by Mr. and Mrs. Johnson before members of the National Geographic Society.

The huge beast, trapped in his tree when all other surrounding trees were cut down, was gradually pulled down from his perch after being lassoed, and injured seven natives at the foot of the tree before being secured. The ape died only recently in the Bronx Zoo, New York, of influenza.

The pictures, taken on the last trip of the Johnsons, were accompanied by a lecture by Joseph Tilton, a member of the expedition. He was introduced by Mrs. Johnson.

Among the strange jungle wonders photographed in Borneo by the expedition were tree-climbing fish, which come out of the water and climb up on the lower branches of trees to capture insects; oysters that "grow on trees," the bivalves being deposited on tree branches during high water and clinging there, to be found later when the water goes down.

D. A. R. Unit Aids Teacher Stand on Oath

Allegiance Vow Called Sufficient by Group of Educators.

Washington school teachers last night had the backing of the patriotic education chairman of the Daughters of the American Revolution in their contention that their oath of allegiance makes unnecessary such special restrictions as the red rider.

The teachers, members of the Education Association of the District of Columbia, recently drew up a statement indicating their attitude in relation to freedom of teaching in the local public schools. Three points made in this statement follow:

"We believe that the American form of government gains in the respect and admiration of people in proportion as it is brought into open contrast with other world forms."

See "Danger" to Rights.

"We believe that the teacher must be left free to consider all existing forms of government in order properly to give to the American child an understanding of and love for our own. We feel, therefore, that certain restrictions now being advocated dangerously encroach upon the rights of free men and women guaranteed under our Constitution.

"We believe that the present oath of allegiance to the Constitution of the United States is sufficient to insure the above and provide an adequate basis for prosecution in case of violation."

Lauded by Mrs. Sisson.

The statement was given to Mrs. Adelaide H. Sisson, chairman of the national defense through patriotic education committee of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and she, in a letter to Miss Grace Lind, president of the Education Association, said:

"A copy of the statement issued by your group relative to the American form of government, freedom of teachers in the classroom and the oath of allegiance has just come to my attention.

"I wish to express to you my sincere appreciation of this clear-cut statement and to commend you upon this stand. It gives exactly the point of view I have so often expressed, and as national chairman of this committee I have contended that such an attitude should receive the support of both educators and the public."

'Maytime' Is Acclaimed as A Masterpiece

"MAYTIME." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the operetta by Sigmund Romberg and Rida Johnson Young, adapted to the screen by Noel Langley, costarring Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, with John Barrymore, Herman Bing, Tom Brown, Lynne Carver, Rafaelo Ottiano, Charles Judels, Paul Porcasi, Sigmund Ruman, Walter Kingsford and Guy Bates Post. Directed by Robert Z. Leonard. Reviewed Friday afternoon at Loew's Palace by Mary Harris.

A monster roll of drums instead of a mere line o' type ought to start any review of "Maytime." In the words of the current song, this picture is "just too marvelous—too marvelous for words." "Maytime" is not only a picture of the year, but one of the finest screen musicals ever produced. Yesterday's audience burst into spontaneous applause at the final fade-out.

To continue this highly deserved panegyric, some pictures have something, some have nothing, but "Maytime" has everything. Music, acting, direction, story and spirit are all in tune. Also, it is an inspired example of that finest formula for show success—it makes you laugh and it makes you cry.

A prime result of "Maytime" will be the loud explosion of that myth that Jeanette MacDonald can't act. The MacDonald's acting and makeup as an ancient dame meditating on the glories of her youth cannot be beaten or even tied. The cracked voice, the doddering walk, the old lady mannerisms are 50 years away from the shimmering story of youth in May which it introduces. As for the climaxing moment of reunion between the phantom lovers—well, the girl back of us said it. She sniffed, "This part kills me."

A Glorious Musical Score.

There is a skyscraperful of music. Not only the lovely Romberg lyrics of the original operetta, but flashes from dozens of the finest operas, and some of the simpler songs that everyone loves. Most remarkable is a bit of imaginary opera embodying excerpts from Tschaikovsky's Fifth Symphony. Beautiful, too, is "The Girls of Cadiz" with its triple accompaniment of orchestra, military band and the Don Cossack Choir. Romberg's "Can You Remember" and "Carry Me Back to Old Viginny" both constitute an unfair atack on the emotions. Smartest musical by-play is that embodying snatches from all the sacrosanct old operas into a song about ham and eggs and the need for borrowing a little money.

Nelson Eddy is in splendid voice and gives an attractive acting performance as well. Some folks opine that this lad can't act much. But for us, we think he's strictly all right. It is well to see a leading man who acts like a man instead of a monkey (or another word ending in "y").

Barrymore at Best.

John Barrymore, playing the role of MacDonald's husband and the perpetrator of a crime passionel, is restrained and powerful. If the leading people were not so inevitably dominating, there would be a swell lot of show-stealing by other players. Not a single part is less than excellently played. But Rafaelo Ottiano os the prima donna's maid and Herman Bing as a singing teacher are outstanding; also Charles Judels as a Parisian cabby. There is a too brief flash of Guy Bates Post as Louis Napoleon. Tom Brown and Lynne Carver, two of Hollywood's pleasanter juveniles, appear romantically in the extra plot that frames the story.

There is something practically monumental in the direction of Robert Z. Leonard. From the floating petals that announce the cast to the pert bustles and period coiffures, everything seems to be perfect. Especially to be commended is the sequence of flashes denoting the passage of ten years in the life of a great diva. Rolling locomotives, glimpses of great cities, torn programs, bounding seas, attentive audiences all are woven on a surging bond of great melody.

"See Maytime'."

If you could noly see one picture for the next six months, we'd say, see "Maytime." But we had one little shadow of regret about it. We wish it had been done in color, which would have enriched the carnival scenes and the flamboyant costuming of Adrian.

The newsreel showed rather one-sided angling on the Supreme Court question. There is a jolly color cartoon in which Easter eggs hatch out multi-colored chicks.

Metropolitan

"NO MAN OF HER OWN." Paramount reissue of its picturization of a story by Edmund Goulding and Benjamin Glazer, with screen play by Maurine Watkins and Milton H. Gropper, starring Clark Gable, supported by Carole Lombard, Grant Mitchell, Lillian Harmer, Paul Ellis, Dorothy Mackaill, Elizabeth Patterson, George Barbier, J. Farrell MacDonald, Tommy Conlon and Walter Walker. Directed by Wesley Ruggles. Reviewed Friday afternoon by T. Johnson Williams.

Four seasons ago feminine hearts were set decidedly aflame by one who, though not unfamiliar to them, had earlier been seen in but minor capacities. Since that time the name and fame of Clark Gable has continued to grow. "No Man of Her Own" was the picture, and yesterday it was again unspooled for the delectation of the public.

A cast that reads like Paramount's who's who of 1933 supports Mr. Gable in this rather routine revelation of card sharpers and the ultimate rehabilitation, through love, of the boss manipulator. One needs no further detail of the narrative, for, even it be not remembered, the Gable presence would serve as the picture's entire justification in the public mind.

For those to whom Mr. Gable is not the end-all and be-all of cinema attendance, there are many another whose endowments should satisfy. Carole Lombard and Dorothy Mackaill—the former as the wife, the latter as the earlier foil—bear the brunt of the distaff labors, although Elizabeth Patterson and Lillian Harmer are cast in well-played roles.

From the archives of the year following that of the feature comes "The Fatal Glass of Beer," starring W. C. Fields in a burlesqued melodrama of the gay 90's type and supported by Rosemary Theby and George Chandler.

Besides the news compilation, edited from the Paramount and Universal News reels, there is a passable cartoon, "Picador Porky."

'King and Chorus Girl' Is Handsomely Staged Farce With Catchy Music.

"THE KING AND THE CHORUS GIRL." Warner Brothers picturization of an original story by Norman Krasna and Groucho Marx, with music and lyrics by Werner R. Heymann and Ted Koehler, starring Fernand Gravet, Joan Blondell, Edward Everett Horton and Mary Nash, supported by Alan Mowbray, Jane Wyman, Luis Alberni, Kenny Baker, Shaw and Lee, Lionel Pape, Leonard Mudie and Adrian Roseley. Produced and directed by Mervyn LeRoy. Previewed Monday, March 22.

It would be unfair to future audiences to reveal the nature of the first hilarious scene of this picture, but in the very first frames of the film's footage it establishes the almost farcical note upon which the entire action of the picture is played. It is completely surprising and extremely amusing.

BELL.

The story of "The King and the Chorus Girl," naturally, is based on that time-honored theme of the king and the commoner, but it has been dealt with so deftly, has been so elaborately embellished in the truly royal manner and is acted with such cleverness that it takes on all of the color and glamour of a new experience in screen-gazing.

Perhaps no other feature of the camera play is so important as its introduction of Fernand Gravet, in the role of the young ex-king, Alfred VII, as a new personality in America's cinema. This young man seems to the regal manner born and delivers an impersonation that is at once gay, humorous and wholly attractive. He is a handsome chap, who wears smart clothes like a gentleman and speaks his lines with a variety of inflection and agreeable change of pace that make his performance one of especial interest and effectiveness.

Star Has Fine Support.

The other title role, that of the American chorus girl appearing at the Folies Bergere in Paris, is played by Joan Blondell just about as an American chorus girl with a little more than average intelligence and discretion should be played. Edward Everett Horton, Mary Nash and Alan Mowbray round out the group of principals in this lively charade of a former monarch in ardent quest of the only young woman who has interested him in years.

Mr. Horton and Miss Nash are cast as Count Humbert and the Duchess Anna, who preside over his palatial apartment within sight of the Eiffel Tower; Mr Mowbray as a headwaiter in an obscure restaurant who is inveigled—for a price—into making the king's quest of the dancer's favor as difficult as possible. That is pretty difficult.

However, the whole merry business works out as all musical farces should when the rich young royalist charters an ocean liner and takes his bride aboard it alone on a honeymoon trip to Niagara Falls, of all places! It must have been Groucho Marx, coauthor of the story, with Norman Krasna, who conceived the idea of an ocean greyhound, about the size of the Queen Mary, taking the place of the Maid o' the Mist in Niagara's dampish sprays!

Throughout the action of this musical comicality unexpected twists of humor are injected that keep it continuously diverting. The few songs that are introduced are well sung by Kenny Baker and a sprightly ensemble in which Miss Blondell reveals unexpected talents as a can-can dancer.

Is Gorgeously Staged.

The piece is produced with an opulence and directed with a skill that suggests the adroit touch of an Ernst Lubitsch, which is about as high a compliment as Mervyn LeRoy, the producer-director, could be paid. The photography is perfect and the rounded perfection of the production one of its outstanding assets.

On the stage this Easter week, the entire entertainment is provided by Jan Garber and his orchestra and the specialists they bring with them. Garber has never had a better stage revue than this, nor a more perfectly balanced instrumentation. The blare of brasses is almost wholly absent and real melody is produced for the edification of the customers who prefer music to noise.

Foremost among the specialty artists are Crawford and Caskey, a team of dancers already known to Washington. They execute a wide variety of numbers and scored decisively at yesterday's first performance.

Ryans Stop Show.

No less can be said of the Three Ryan Brothers, dancers and eccentric acrobatic comedians, who virtually stopped the goings-on at the performance reviewed.

Russell Brown displays a nice barytone voice in several ballads and Tony Allen goes a little classical with "Laugh, Clown, Laugh," with an interpolation of the "Vesti la Giubba" aria from "Pagliacci." Others who do their full share are Fritz Heilbron, Lee Palmer and Rudy Rudisol.

The Paramount News is the screen auxiliary of a feature that is not important beyond its unequivocal ability to afford polished and delightful entertainment amid a richness of investiture that is as memorable as the ingratiating personality of a new star who should go far on the American screen.

Columbia

"THE LAST OF MRS. CHEYNEY." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the play by Frederic Lonsdale, adapted to the screen by Leon Gordon, Samuel Raphaelson and Monckton Hoffe, starring Joan Crawford, William Powell and Robert Montgomery, with Frank Morgan, Jessie Ralph, Nigel Bruce, Colleen Clare, Benita Hume, Ralph Forbes, Aileen Pringle, Melville Cooper, Sara Haden, Lumsden Hare and Wallis Clark. Directed by Richard Boleslavski. Reviewed Friday afternoon, repeat engagement, by Sally Stroud.

According to the swanky female Raffles who figures in the name role in this drawing-room frappe, almost anything is permissible providing it is done with a "charm of manner." Which person would be Joan Crawford trying to extricate herself from a delicate situation. Even in drawing-room dramas it is considered a bit thickish to steal pearl necklaces from one's weekend hostess.

Reviving the old Lonsdale play, which was daringly exciting some while ago, this last-of-the-Boleslavski's has ocasionally some of the sparkle and snap which the original must have had. In part, the dialogue bogs down with the weight of years; or is it the situations which seem antedeluvian?

Frank Morgan, in fine fettle, blunders charmingly as ever and is a great relief when Crawford and leading-man Robert Montgomery get too Coward-Lawrencey for the frail framework of the plot.

Jessie Ralph, as the dowager aunt of Montgomery, is an exquisitely execrable dame of some humor and much wisdom; Aileen Pringle, favorite of silent-film days, is briefly present; the entire cast is smoothly-functioning. William Powell, as the brains of the jewel thief gang, quietly steals the show.

RKO-Keith's

"QUALITY STREET." RKO-Radio picturization of the play of the same name by Sir James M. Barrie, with screen play by Mortimer Offner and Allan Scott, starring Katharine Hepburn and Franchot Tone, supported by Fay Bainter, Eric Blore, Cora Witherspoon, Clifford Severn, Joan Fontaine, Roland Varno, William Bakewell, Florence Lake, Estelle Winwood, Helen Grant and Bonita Granville. Directed by George Stevens. Reviewed Friday morning by W. A. Whitney.

Washington yesterday and today is experiencing one of those rare coincidences which permit, within reason, the direct comparison of histrionic performance on the stage and the screen. What the public consensus of the work of Katharine Hepburn in "Jane Eyre" may be in comparison with that exhibited in "Quality Street" is of little importance here. The main thing is that the screen version of Sir James M. Barrie's drama is on view.

Here is a picture which seems to fit Miss Hepburn's talents best since "A Bill of Divorcement." As a girl of 20, she is passingly effective, but as the "old maid" of 30, who defies the traditions of her associates and goes after her man by making him fall in love with her, mistaking her for a niece, Miss Hepburn reveals more truly her ability.

"Quality Street" is not Miss Hepburn's best picture, nor is it her least worthy effort. The action of the play is slow—as it would have to be in an English costume period—and the story rather obvious, yet her presence in it helps to shed distinction on the Barrie work.

Fay Bainter Shines.

For high histrionic honors one must mention Fay Bainter as Miss Hepburn's elder sister and partner to the latter's amatory deception. To those familiar with Miss Bainter and her work upon the speaking stage, no testimonial is necessary. But for the benefit of those to whom that name is merely a name, let it be said that a treat is in store.

Opposite Miss Hepburn is Franchot Tone, as capable a leading man as she has had, the possessor actually of those "dashing" qualities that Phoebe Throssel admired in Valentine Brown. The incidental comedy is added by Eric Blore and Cora Witherspoon. The assembled personnel of Quality Street—where the coming of a man was an event—are finely cast.

Here, in "Quality Street" is a Barrie confection, more or less frothy in composition, which makes no pretense at plumbing anything. Merely does it recreate the essence of the period when women were ladies and, if they did not marry, became plainly old maids. There is an authentic atmosphere about the work that never fails to hold interest.

"Time Marches On."

For drama, terse and informative, it is the current isue of "The March of Time" that must, as usual, be given premiere mention. In its characteristic manner, the past history and present status of child labor and the proposed constitutional amendment is recounted; the rise of voodooism in Harlem and its attendant charlatanism and racketeering are described; and the crisis, as reflected in Lloyds, of manufacturers occasioned by the abdication of Edward VIII and the threat of coronation postponement is effectively told.

Other supplementary subjects are "The Birthday Party," an Oswald Rabbit cartoon, and an issue of Pathe News.

Dancers With Jan Garber at Earle

"A FAMILY AFFAIR." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturisation of Aurania Rouveyrol's play of "Skidding," adapted to the screen by Kay Van Riper, featuring Lionel Barrymore, Eric Linden and Cecilia Parker, with Spring Byington, Julie Haydon, Mickey Rooney, Sara Haden and Charles Grapewin. Directed by George B. Seitz. Previewed Tuesday, March 23.

Presented, as nearly as may be indoors, like the shows usually produced under the "big tops," this aggregation of sawdust-ring and hippodrome attractions affords a fast-moving and diversified innovation.

The thing is done in true circus fashion. With Art Brown to provide a brief interlude at the console of the pipe organ, the orchestra, caparisoned in flaming red coats and towering red hats, files through the cross-aisle to their places in the pit. The curtains part and Phil Lampkin, conductor, makes his entrance on one of Lillian St. Leon's resin-backs to lead the grand march down the center aisle of the auditorium. All of the performers make their first entrance in this grand parade.

There was a slight hitch at yesterday afternoon's second performance when one of G. T. Byrne's elephants went slightly berserk, stopped the procession to do a little Grade A trumpeting and almost sat down in your reporter's lap. However, no harm was done and from then on the show ran at a swift pace under the ringmastership of the glib and enthusiastic Wally Sharples.

Elephants Open Show.

The elephants—the one of them still a trifle recalcitrant—put on the first turn and were followed by Woolford's Weenies, an especially well-trained troupe of dachshunds. Then came Paul Jung, recently of the Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey tent show, and after him the Great Johnson contortionist and aerialist. Capt. Pickard's Seals took the next spot with some of the uncanny feats of balancing and juggling that these amphibians seem better able to do than any other trained "animal act."

Ted Allen, world's champion horseshoe pitcher, performed unbelievable stunts of ringing the peg under all manner of obstructing conditions, and Pallenberg's Bears rode bicycles and otherwise disclosed fine training. Lillian St. Leon & Co., present an equestrienne act, "How Circus Riders Are Made," that combines skill with comedy and made a hit with yesterday's crowd. The "circus" is closed by that amazing band of ten Arabian acrobats and gymnasts known as the Liazeed Troupe.

Interspersed with all this are the antics of the clowns and the other usual trimmings of a real circus under canvas. The orchestra floor lounge has been converted into a menagerie tent for the week and altogether ought to give all of the kids from 6 to 106 a considerable kick—especially if that elephant tries to sit down in their laps!

The screen feature for the week is "A Family Affair," in which the principal role is played with his customary conviction and power by Lionel Barrymore, supported by much the same cast as appeared in "Ah, Wilderness"—Eric Linden, Cecilia Parker, Spring Byington and others, plus Mickey Rooney, Charles Grapewin and Julie Haydon.

The story is that of an honest, small-town judge who refuses to be bull-dozed either by a gang of grafting political racketeers or by the members of his own family, who manage to misconstrue everything he does to preserve the integrity of his office. The play reaches its climax in a political convention hall, where Judge Hardy delivers an eleventh-hour appeal for support that completely routs his opponents and reunites his family.

There is strength and an appreciable degree of good, old-fashioned hokum in this scene, but it wins the day.

Master Rooney Scores.

Next to the eldest of the Barrymores I should say that the most able performances are turned in by Master Mickey Rooney, one of the best of the juvenile actors; Cecilia Parker and Eric Linden, who interpret the romantic trends of the drama. There is an auto ride down a treacherous road that will cause all drivers of motor cars to shudder and burst into cold perspiration, but that, too, serves its purpose as a motivating element in the play.

George B. Seitz' direction quite captures the spirit and tempo of small-city life and the photography does the story justice without ever obtruding itself as a major purpose of the work.

A new issue of the Fox Movietone News picturizes the important news events of the past week and serves as the major screen supplementary of a bill that rather obviously, and probably intentionally, subordinates the motion picture portion of the program to the color, life, hullabaloo and novelty of a tanbark entertainment moved indoors for a week.

Opposes Court Plan.

The attorneys voted 86 to 37 for a resolution, sponsored by Irvine F. Belser, of Columbia, disapproving the proposal.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

East and West were quite disgruntled after the play of today's hand. South had played the hand at three notrump and had made his contract. It did not seem right to the defender that he should have made it with so much ease. They felt sure that somewhere or other they had slipped in the defense, but it took them quite a long time to discover where they had made their mistake. See how long it takes you.

West opened the eight of spades; udmmy won with the Ace, East encouraging with the ten. A low club was next led from dummy, East played low and South won with the King. Declarer then led a low heart from his own hand, West played low, and dummy won with the King. From this point all declarer had to do was knock out the Ace of clubs and make another spade trick. He thus made two spades, one heart, three diamonds and three clubs.

The mistake by the defenders occurred on the second trick. When a low club was led from the dummy at this early stage East should have played the Ace at once instead of ducking.

His next play would be a low spade which declarer would have to win with the Queen or Jack. At this point declarer would be able to take three clubs and three diamonds in addition to two spades already won. But he would never be able to make a heart trick! As soon as South led a heart West would play the Ace and lead his last spade. Obviously, this would permit East to take the rest of his suit.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, March 27.—Idol chatter: Have you noticed that Charles Boyer's eyes are dead ringers for Rudolph Valentino's. The Garbo influence again; George Brent's studio does not have his telephone number and can reach him only through his agent. For the next war, Uncle Sam might build up an army from Mary Brian's rejected (Dear printer: Don't make that word "dejected") suitors. Name that improves in reverse: Nelson Eddy. Nobody can match Bing Crosby's look of utter disinterest in things around him.

GEORGE BRENT.

Dress William Powell in a uniform and he struts like a stilt walker. Morgan Hall (nom de filme of Fifi d'Orsay's husband) sounds more like a New York banker's Fifth avenue estate. Cary Grant surprises with those outlandishly striped shirts and ties.

Scene stealer: Walter Brennan. Something incongruous about Joan Crawford humming "The World Owes Me a Living." Sid Silver's elegant crack: "If he keeps breaking air speed records, Howard Hughes won't be able to say, 'I can't get away from Hollywood fast enough'."

What a rough-and-tumble if Vic McLaglen and Barton McDaine were to match fists! Virginia Bruce's hair looks like an ad for a soft-water shampoo. Wonder how far Mary Nolan's pearl-clear beauty might have carried her had she taken a slower train? Critic's comment I never expect to read: "George Raft mugs too much." With that giant cigar at full puff, Ben Bernie looks more like a shrewd politician. You will never see such hand-gesticulating as when ZaSa Pitts and Jimmy Cagney get together.

Preston Foster's first years in Hollywood were attended by little success. A year at M.-G.-M., where he had no parts worth mention, was followed by an equally lackadaisical year with Warner Brothers. Then he was signed by R. K. O. It was at this studio that he was confronted by a writer friend.

"Don't lose heart, Pres," the friend kidded. "There are still Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox, and Universal—three more years on a year-a-studio basis."

"If my agent lives," retorted Foster, "and you keep your damned mouth shut, three more years will be enough!"

During the recent cold spell, when California shivered with its chilliest weather since the oldest inhabitant knows when, Shirley Temple was asked how she liked it. "Fine!" she exclaimed cheerfully. "This morning when I tossed a rock in the fishpond, the water was so hard it floated." It was the first time native-born Shirley had ever seen ice except in blocks and cubes.

Some day I will quit trying to figure out a sensible basis for movie pay rate. I have just learned that a giant python, guaranteed not to squeeze too hard, brings a rental of $50 a day, while a rattlesnake complete with fangs and other modern appliances (but sans poison ducts) can be had for as little as $1.

There is a trained duck which nets its owner $75 for eight hours, but one studio rented a flock of ducks for $25, including an educated quacker. Ordinary cats are a drug on the market, but there is one cunning feline that keeps its owner in champagne and squab-under-glass.

What I am trying to get at is this: It seems a waste of time for me to sit around and write words for a pittance, when I might get into a more lucrative field, such as teaching a pig to stand on its ears and say meow. A fellow with trained hogs can hold up his head in the best of Hollywood society—after a bath, of course.

Michigan Sets Mark, Leads in College Swim Title Race

Two Titlists Lose in 1st Day of Meet

Wolverine's 300-Yard Medley Relay Team Cracks Record.

Michigan Leads With 34 Points; Ohio State Has 27 and Yale 21.

By the Associated Press.

Minneapolis, March 26.—The University of Michigan served notice it is not yet ready to relinquish its National swimming crown by outdistancing a fast field in the first day's events of the fourteenth annual intercollegiate championships today.

When the firing in the six events had ceased tonight the Wolverines rode well out in front with 34 points, followed by Ohio State with 27, and Yale with 21.

Another feature of today's competition was the dethroning of two of last year's individual champions, Daniel Zehr, of Northwestern University in the 150-yard back stroke, and Ray Walters, of Iowa, in the 50-yard free style.

Other teams with points after the first day's work were Northwestern with 10; University of Iowa, 7; Stanford, 4; University of Pennsylvania, Massachusetts State and Minnesota, each with 2, and Illinois with 1.

Wolverines Set Mark.

While exceptionally fast times were turned in for most of today's events, only one record was bettered, that in the 300-yard medley relay preliminaries when Michigan churned the distance in 2:57.8, breaking its own mark of 2:58.2 made in the 1936 intercollegiates.

Racing against time, John Macionis, member of the United States Olympic team last year, swam the 1,500-meter free style event in 19:58.5 to give the Eli its first place and 6 points. A teammate, P. Brueckel, was fifth, to garner an additional point.

Second in the long-distance event was Dave Rider, of Stanford; Junior Pacific Association champion in the 440-yard event, Dexter Woodford of Ohio State University was third, and Capt. Frank Barnard of the University of Michigan, fourth.

The record setting Michigan medley relay team was composed of Kirar, Jack Kasley and Frederick Cody. Kasley, who is the world's champion in the 200-yard and 200-meter events set up a terrific pace throughout his 100-yard turn in his specialty.

Kirar became the new champion in the 50-yard free style event when he splashed to the finish line in 0:23.2, just three-tenths of a second short of the record for this race.

Michigan counted 10 points in the short race when Waldemar Tomski, a teammate, breezed in just behind Kirar. R. Penn, of Yale, was third, while Walters, the defending champion, was able to gain no better than sixth.

Zehr fell before the powerful stroke of William Neunzig, of Ohio State, who traveled the 150-yard backstroke race in 1:37.1. Zehr holds the national intercollegiate record of 1:36.8 made in the 1936 meet held at Yale University.

The defending champions collected another first place when Tom Haynie flashed to the front in 2:11.5 in the 220-yard free style. Dexter Woodford, of Ohio State, was second while P. Brueckel, of Yale, was third.

Patterson Wins Diving.

Jim Patterson, of Ohio State, undefeated in a dual meet all season, gave his school first place in the one-meter board diving, the well-built youth piling up a point total of 135.80 to far outdistance his five rivals. Ben Grady, of Michigan, was second with 117.30, and D. Endweiss, of Yale, third, with 107.

The Ohio State diver won nine of his ten dives, losing only the front dive, the first of the required performances.

Five events still remain on the program, the 100-yard free style, 200-yard breaststroke, 400-yard free style relay, three-meter high board diving, and 440-yard free style. Qualifying in all of these events will be held Saturday afternoon with the finals at night.

1,500-meter free style—Won by John Macionis (Yale); time, 19:58.5; Dick Rider (Stanford), second, 20:00.3; Dexter Woodford (Ohio State), third, 20:05.8; Frank Bernard (Michigan), fourth, 20:25.5; P. Brueckel (Yale), fifth, 20:35.3; G. Lowe (Illinois), sixth, 20:42.1.

50-yard free style—Won by Kirar (Michigan); Tomski (Michigan), second; Penn (Yale), third; Gisbourne (Pennsylvania), fourth; Hudson (Minnesota), fifth; Walters (Iowa), sixth. Time, 0:23.2.

150-yard back stroke—Won by Neumzig (Ohio State); Westerfield (Iowa), third; Cody (Ohio State); Zehr (Northwestern), second (Michigan), fourth; Mittendorf (Yale), fifth; Brandt (Minnesota), sixth. Time, 1:37.1.

One meter low board diving—Won by Jim Patterson, State, 135.80 points; Ben Grady, Michigan; second, 117.30; D. Endweiss, Yale, third, 107; Floyd Stauffer, Chicago, fourth, 103.12; Leonard Klun, Minnesota, fifth, 101.38; W. Danferth, Yale, 86.38.

300-yard medley relay—Won by Michigan (Frederick Cody, Jack Kasley, Edward Kirar); Ohio, second; Northwestern, third; Iowa, fourth; Yale, fifth; Minnesota, sixth. Time, 2:58.4.

220-yard freestyle—Won by Tom Haynie, Michigan; Dexter Woodford, Ohio State, second; P. Brueckel, Yale, third; J. Macionis, Yale, fourth; Norman Lewis, Illinois, fifth; Charles Wilson, Chicago, sixth. Time, 2:11.5.

Tarheel Tennis Team Blanks Yale by 10 to 0

Chapel Hill, N. C., March 26 (AP).—The University of North Carolina tennis team opened its season this afternoon by defeating Yale's netmen, 10 to 0.

The Tarheels exhibited a fast, smooth-stroking team which took every set on the program of seven singles and three doubles matches.

'Double Play' Roller Gives Bluege Triple

By Shirley Povich.
A Star Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., March 26.—The Nats, apparently a clean-living bunch, won another ball game today. But they would prefer that no questions be asked. Because then it would have to be told how they were getting a fine trimming from the Detroit Tigers until that unpredictable old gal, Dame Fortune, tossed a rare piece of good luck at the Nats and lifted 'em to a 6-4 victory.

Their winning streak, which had reached the imposing proportions of six games, was just about to expire along about the eighth inning today when Ossie Bluege whacked a ball toward shortstop. It was a double-play ball if ever there were a double play, and Bill Rogell set himself confidently to make the catch and start proceedings, when all of a sudden, and maybe sooner, the little white pellet took the notion to leap fully four feet over the amazed Rogell's head and skip into left center field for a cheap but game-winning three-base hit.

The Nats were a run in arrears at the time and the two runs that scored on the blow lifted 'em into a 5-4 lead.

Newsom Helps—Tigers.

Buck Newsom, who had ideas last winter that he would be traded to the Tigers, put himself in solidly with the Detroit club today. They discovered he would be of great value to 'em if he stayed right with the Washington club. At least they had a right to think so.

Because it was against Newsom that the Tigers took a 3-1 lead and scored all but one of their runs. They made only six hits off Newsom, who pitched six innings, but they were hitting for distance. Four of their half dozen blows were triples by Charley Gehringer, Jake Wade, Chet Laabs and Rudy York.

They picked up another run in the seventh against Jack Salveson and had a couple of more working in the eighth before Johnny Mihalic started a double play with the bases full.

Washington took a 1-0 lead without benefit of a single hit when Jake Wade lost control in the first inning, gave a pair of walks to Chapman and Bluege and inserted a wild pitch. Sington's long fly to right scored Chapman.

But just to show how things go, the Nats couldn't score on two hits

Mrs. Stoddard's Horse Wins Aiken Show Cup

Aiken, S. C., March 26 (AP).—The Francis P. Garvan Challenge Cup today was in the hands of Mrs. Louis Stoddard, jr., of New York, whose chestnut gelding, Gunner Johren, won the point-to-point race over a seven-entry field in the Todd Cut of the Hitchcock Woods. Mrs. Stoddard's husband rode.

Captain Lee, gelding owned by Bayard Warren, of Prides Crossing, Mass., and ridden by Barney Balding, of New York, followed by seven lengths, trailed by Mister Jingo, owned and ridden by Howell H. Howard, of Dayton, Ohio.

Third in Row to Leros.

Travis Felled by Throw From Hogan

Orlando, Fla., March 26.—Another day, another Nat felled. Cecil Travis was today's victim, joining Outfielder Taft Wright and First Baseman Joe Kuhel in that growing company of Washington players who have been hit on the head with a ball this week.

Wright and Kuhel were beaned with pitches, but Travis was the victim of Catcher Shanty Hogan's throwing arm. It happened in infield practice before today's game with the Tigers.

Travis, at shortstop, was taking a throw to second base from Hogan when Jack Salveson, who was hitting flies to the outfielders, yelled "heads up" as a pop fly started near Travis. Travis looked up just in time to receive Hogan's throw on the middle of his forehead.

The Nats' shortstop was knocked unconscious by the blow and carried to the clubhouse, where his injury was diagnosed as not serious. He was kept out of today's line-up, however.

Bright and Early Wins.

Hot Springs, Ark., March 26 (AP).—Bright and Early, carrying the colors of R. Robertson, nosed out the Motor City Stable's well-liked Appealing in the Ted Baily Handicap at Oaklawn Park today. G. Watts' Panic Relief, which set the early pace over the Oaklawn course of a little less than 6 furlongs, finished third in a close stretch battle.

Gould Hints Chicago Out as Fight Scene

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 26.—Joe Gould, manager of the missing heavyweight champion, James J. Braddock, today tossed fresh confusion into the preposterous heavyweight situation declaring he will not go to Chicago until he is convinced the Illinois Legislature will not set a $10 top price on the Braddock-Joe Louis fight June 22.

"I ain't gonna fight no legislatures," said Joe. "I ain't gonna fight no politicians. Until the Chicago situation is cleared up and I know that the $10 top is out, I ain't gonna budge."

Lounging on a large green divan in his midtown hotel, Gould, who has been "missing" himself for three days, laughed at questions about Champion Braddock's whereabouts.

Madison Square Garden, holding a contract with Braddock to meet Max Schmeling, of Germany, in New York, June 3, last Monday tried to bring Braddock into a Miami, Fla., court to explain why he should not keep this contract before considering the Louis bout. But papers were not served and Braddock vanished.

Gould later declared Braddock was on his way to Chicago, but Joe Foley, promoter of the proposed Louis-Braddock fight, declared today the champion had not arrived. Furthermore, Foley suspected both Gould and Braddock had fled to Germany to close a deal to fight Schmeling there.

A Little Irked.

"I ain't tellin' where Jim is," continued his manager. "If I tell you, Madison Square Garden will clap papers on him like that."

Gould at that moment claims to be convinced Chicago in general and the Illinois Senate and Mayor Kelly of Chicago in particular don't want the Louis Braddock fight.

"If they want it, why did the Chicago Park Commisson ask 25 per cent of the gate for rentin' Soldier Field?" he asked. "And why didn't Mayor Kelly attend the signin' when Louis and Braddock put it on the line? Yeah, and why did that Senate out there vote a $10 top for the fight?"

Without expecting an explanation, Joe answered himself.

"I'll tell you, because they don't want the fight!"

Yet little Joe believes all complications may clear up within a week.

"If things don't clear up out there, we always have the German offer," he said. The German offer was one of $350,000 to Braddock, tax free, to meet Schmeling in Berlin this summer, but it was withdrawn last Tuesday.

"There's lots of places we can put on this fight," Gould continued. "Philadelphia would love to have us, and so would Cleveland and Detroit. Yeah, and if we don't straighten it out, we may go around the world. Jim's been off now for two years and he can stay off for another."

Jersey Bowlers Score in Meet

New York, March 26 (AP).—Continuing the drive they began in the five-man team division, Bayonne, N. J., bowlers took over second places in both singles and all-events competition of the American Bowling Congress today.

Nat Addis rolled games of 208, 223, 232 for a 663 total to take the runner-up spot behind Jimmy Reinsmith, of Syracuse, with 690, in the singles, displacing Joe Trzeciak, another Syracuse contender, by one pin.

Frank Vetter, member of the Bayonne Wheelmen five which advanced to second place in the team race last night, slipped into the No. 2 spot in all-events with a nine-game aggregate of 1,879, by his 656 in the team scoring, 605 in doubles and 618 in singles. He trailed M. Debridget, of New York, with 1,927, but passed Trzeciak, who fell to third place with 1,867.

$8,000 Blaze Razes Empty Bowie Stable

84 Horses Were to Have Occupied It Next Week; Origin Unknown.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Bowie, Md., March 26.—An unoccupied stable at the Bowie Race Track burned to the ground last night. The spectacular blaze, of unknown origin, swept the wooden structure known as "Stable Y" and situated in a remote section of the grounds, in back of the starting point for 4-furlong races.

Although the stable is not regularly assigned, Track Supt. Richard Pending said last night that 84 horses were scheduled to have been stabled there early next week. He estimated damage at $8,000.

The fire was well underway when discovered and the volunteer fire departments of Bowie and Glendale answered the alarm. The stable is located on the hill to the left of the plant and was to the leeward of the strong northwest wind prevailing. Firemen kept the blaze from spreading to the adjacent woods.

Four hundred horses are now stabled at Bowie awaiting the start of Maryland's race season, scheduled for next Thursday.

Ann Bono, 'Y' Relayers Set Swim Meet Marks

Little Ann Bono thrashed her vest-pocket form through the waters of the Shoreham pool last night to steal the show in the annual District A. A. U. indoor swimming championships by winning the 50-yard and 220-yard freestyle finals, breaking a District record in the former. The meet concludes tonight.

Covering the 50-yard distance in 30.2 seconds, the smiling Western High student shattered her own D. C. mark of 30.4 seconds and shortly afterward came out to take the furlong title which Rita Augusterfer, 1936 champion, did not defend.

In the only other final of the evening, the Central Y. M. C. A. medley relay squad broke a 4-year-old record for the 300-yard team event.

Composed of three of the fastest paddlers in the city, Ernie Boggs in the backstroke; Paul Wilson in the breaststroke and Karl Schmitt free style, the "Y" smashed the mark of 3:20 set by George Washington University in 1933 by 1 2-5 seconds.

The race for the women's individual high-point plaque developed close lines, although Miss Bono held a slight lead at the evening's close. Ann Aronson of the Ambassador was giving the Shoreham girl a close run, running up 7 points to Miss Bono's 10. Miss Aronson placed second in the two free style finals and third in the backstroke. She races Miss Bono in both the medley and the 100-yard free style tonight.

Less keen was the battle for the men's team trophy held by the Central Y. M. C. A. which appeared certain to retain the cup on the basis of its high number of qualifiers. Conspicuous on tonight's card should be the 50-yard and 100-yard free style events in which Bobby Jordan of Ambassador and Schmitt are the foremost rivals.

WOMEN'S RESULTS.
(Finals.)

50-yard freestyle—Won by Ann Bono (Shoreham); second, Anne Aronson (Ambassador); third, Joyce Helmick (Shoreham). Time, 30.2 seconds. (New District record; former record, 30.4 seconds, set in 1934 by Miss Bono.)

MEN'S RESULTS.
(Finals.)

Ducote, Loyola's Coach, Succumbs

New Orleans, March 25 (AP).—Richard J. ("Moon") Ducote, director of athletics at Loyola University, died in a hospital here today from a complication of diseases.

Ducote, a star fullback at Auburn, had been under treatment for high blood pressure.

While with Auburn he precipitated the rule that field goals must be kicked from the ground by kicking a field goal off a headgear on the 40-yard line.

Henry M. Is Winner.

New Orleans, March 26 (AP).—Henry M., 3-year-old gelding from the stable of L. Delatour, which has been showing steady improvement, chalked up its first victory of the year today in the 6-furlong dash which filled the feature spot at the Fair Grounds.

Ohio State Nine Beats G. W., 11 to 6, Between Squalls

This Morning

WITH SHIRLEY POVICH

Orlando, Fla.

Stanley Raymond Harris, his feet propped against the water cooler in the shade of the Nats' dug-out, looked furtively about him, saw no sign of Clark Griffith, who is very old-maidish about the use of cigarettes by fellows in uniform, and then bummed a smoke.

POVICH.

He had been surveying the Nats' infield practice for 15 minutes and was quite lost with his thoughts. Finally, he spoke.

"Ya know, I don't care what they say about DiMaggio, this Buddy Lewis is the best rookie who's come up to the big leagues since Al Simmons."

Nobody took issue with the Nats' manager, but he continued just the same. "I really mean it. Let 'em rave about DiMaggio and Bob Feller if they want to, but you can't overlook young Buddy. Kids like him only come along once in ten years."

Really?

• • • •

"All right, then, figure it out for yourself. DiMaggio's an outfielder, Feller's a pitcher and Lewis is a third baseman. A manager can lay his hands on plenty of outfielders who will do, and four or five pretty good pitchers come up each year, but good third basemen are rare.

• • • •

"Lookit Jimmy Dykes. He's been trying to retire from third base with the White Sox for three years. The club's got plenty of money and would go high for a young fellow. But everybody they bring up is a disgrace beside Dykes, who admits that he's a handicap to his own team.

"The Red Sox finally had to go out and buy Pinky Higgins from the Athletics, and the Tigers have been itching to replace the weak-hitting Marven Owens for years. I tell you the club that picks up a good young third baseman is lucky. And in Lewis we've got one of the best."

Did Bucky know that DiMaggio batted .321 last year compared to Lewis' .291 and that he drove in a slew more runs?

• • • •

"What of it? Protection at third base is a damn sight more valuable than protection in center field, that's what I mean. Besides, this Lewis hasn't really started to hit yet. He was just a kid last year. He hadn't even started to fill out. Look at him now. Ten pounds heavier and those pounds are going to get him a lot of hits that were caught last year. He's going to be a fence-buster."

• • • •

Would he trade Lewis for DiMaggio?

"Well, that's putting it the tough way. I'd hate to turn that one down, but I'd hate to part with Lewis. I'd have to think that one over."

The Nats' success in the Grapefruit League hasn't turned Harris' head. He recalls only too vividly the pre-season splurges of other clubs who waded through the opposition in the South and never got away from the barrier when the regular season started.

• • • •

"Sure, it's nice to win these games down here," said Harris, "but there's no sense living in a fool's paradise. I know our weaknesses and I know how tough the going will be when other clubs stop trifling with rookies and throw their regular line-ups at us.

• • • •

"How about those Yankees in 1926. They were the worst busts of any team in the South in 1926. Couldn't win a game and the St. Pete bellhops would probably have taken 'em if they had taken the trouble to organize a club. But what happened when the season started? The Yanks broke on top, were never headed, and won the pennant."

Every manager knows pretty well how his team is going to stack up before he brings it South, according to Harris. What he does not know is how one or two individuals who may be important to the club are going to fit in.

• • • •

• • • •

"Those guys will probably represent the difference between our club of 1936 and the Washington team of 1937. They are the fellows who could make or break us. Thus far, I've ascertained only one thing about the trio—Hogan can't miss being a help."

What he really meant to say was, however, that both Lanahan and Sington thus far have been mild disappointments. Lanahan is showing traces of a sore arm that always handicaps his pitching and Sington, well, Sington simply hasn't started to hit the ball in a manner becoming a big league outfielder.

Reds Barry, D.C. Fighter, Is Put on Retired List

Donald (Reds) Barry, a Washington youth who once was considered an outstanding heavyweight prospect, has been placed on the permanent retired list of the National Boxing Association, it was learned yesterday. Barry's rise to fame was rudely interrupted by Joe Louis, who twice knocked out the District redhead.

Helen Dettweiler Made Remark—Golf Profited

HELEN DETTWEILER.

Suggestion Helped Bring 3 Open Tourneys for Women; Home From 12,000-Mile Trip, Proud of Dutra's Praise, Thrilled to Meet Crosby.

Toasted to a honey-colored tan by Southern suns, fair-haired Helen Dettweiler returned from her successful 12,000-mile golfing trip yesterday, eager to resume her links career after a brief interlude at her Chevy Chase home.

Washington's young favorite of the fairways, who had traveled from coast to coast, was distinctly in a cheerful mood. Hadn't she beaten Glenna Collett Vare, the former national champion? Hadn't she beaten Kathryn Hemphill, whom she considers the country's foremost woman golfer? Hadn't she reached the finals of two major tournaments?

And hadn't Professional Olin Dutra, former national champion, told her by all means to stick to golf—because she is sure to go places?

"That was the best thing that happened on the trip," Helen said, biting a piece of candy, but refusing a cigarette. "I mean having Olin Dutra coach me while I was in Hollywood. He helped me so much he reminded me of Roland MacKenzie here at Congressional. With my irons and my putting he improved me immensely.

"He told me I had great possibilities. He works three to six hours a day on his game. He told me to be sure to stick to golf the same way. And that's what I'm going to do—work, work and work at my game. Why, look at Lawson Little, how he practiced till his hands bled. And Glenna Vare, who either had to practice or be spanked by her father."

Golf is as much a part of Helen Dettweiler as her blonde hair and warm smile and it will take no spanking to make her practice. In fact, her slight little mother is a bit worried lest the game again take her 22-year-old only daughter away from home as it has for the past five months.

Unknowingly, Helen helped bring about a new development, her persuasion being the chief factor in installing open tournaments for women at Aiken, S. C., Augusta Invitation and Southern Pines events. It was at Aiken that she remarked to J. R. English, golf head there, that it was too bad Babe Didrikson and Helen Hicks couldn't play in the tournament because it was a closed event.

"I told him it would be a good idea to make it open next year. I never dreamed he would take me seriously. A Washington society lady was standing near by and she joined heartily with me. He said: 'What's the matter with making it open now?' It was already one day old but he made it an open tournament. Right after that Augusta made theirs open and Southern Pines is making theirs open too."

Helen said she knows of several girls who are planning to turn professional and she doesn't think they should be penalized for making a living by being kept out of tournaments.

Washington Gun Club Shoots for 2 Trophies

Yanks Beat Newark, 4-2; Browns Win

By the Associated Press.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 26.—"Twinkletoes" George Selkirk continued to steal the spotlight today as the champion New York Yankees belted their Newark International League farmhands, 4 to 2, behind effective pitching of Walt Brown and Rookie Spurgeon Chandler.

Selkirk, who yesterday stole second, third and home after getting on base, followed it up today with a single in the second inning, and then tripled with two mates on base in the fourth to score the Yanks' opening brace of runs.

Laredo, Tex.—Manager Rogers Hornsby's three hits drove in five runs today as the St. Louis Browns defeated the San Antonio Missions, 13 to 5, in an exhibition baseball game.

One of Hornsby's hits was a double.

Dizzy Wins Golf Match.

Dizzy Dean, only a week in camp, was pitching to the batters, as if he had been in training for a month. He is expected to make his first start against Detroit Sunday.

The feature of a cloudy afternoon here was a golf match between Dizzy and a local star. It drew a big gallery—that pleased Diz—and he won.

Bosox Beat Phillies.

Winter Haven, Fla.—Three bases on balls in the ninth inning with the bases filled and two out gave the Boston Red Sox a 12-to-10 victory over the Phillies today.

Dodgers Win, 5-0.

Clearwater, Fla.—The Brooklyn Dodgers found the offerings of a trio of Boston Bees' rookie hurlers easy to clout today and banged out a 5-to-0 victory with an 11-hit attack.

While Tom Baker and Lefty Clark were letting the Bees down with 5 hits, none of them for extra bases, the Brooklyns played errorless ball and had themselves a grand time belting Bill Perrin, Truett Sewell and Vic Frazier.

Browns Win, 13-6.

Laredo, Tex.—The St. Louis Browns won their third straight exhibition game today, defeating San Antonio, of the Texas League, 13-6.

Trottier and Koupal allowed 11 hits between them. They kept them scattered until the ninth when San Antonio staged a 3-run rally.

Los Angeles—The Chicago White Sox, victor over their home-town rivals with four straight wins in the city series last fall, continued their mastery over the Chicago Cubs today, trimming the Bruins, 4 to 2, largely through the wildness of Roy Parmalee, new Cub hurler.

A single by Jackie Hayes scored 2 runs for the Sox in the first, but the Cubs shoved over markers in their half of the first frame and in the fourth to knot the count. Parmalee entered the game in the sixth, got rid of Bonura on a ground ball, and then walked Appling. Hayes singled Appling to third and then Messner was hit by a pitched ball, filling the bases. The winning run scored a moment later when Brown walked on four straight pitches. The Sox picked up another run in the ninth.

Each team had seven hits.

Feller to Pitch.

New Orleans, La.—Manager Steve O'Neill of the Cleveland Indians announced today he plans to use Willis Hudlin, Ivy Andrews and Whitlow Wyatt on the mound against the New York Giants tomorrow at Jackson, Miss.

O'Neill said he would employ Bob Feller, Lloyd Brown and Tom Drake for the Sunday exhibition contest at Vicksburg, Miss., against the Giants.

Pirates Beaten.

San Bernardino, Calif.—The Los Angeles Angels scored 6 runs in the eleventh inning to defeat the Pittsburgh Pirates, 9 to 8, today.

Jim Weaver and Bill Swift held the Angels to 3 runs in ten innings. Ken Heintzelman pitched the eleventh inning for the Pirates and was the losing pitcher.

Miss Didrikson Meets Miss Miley for Golf Title

Augusta, Ga., March 26 (U.P.).—Mildred (Babe) Didrikson, long-driving Texas professional, will meet Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., tomorrow in the finals of the Augusta Women's Invitation Golf Tournament.

Miss Miley advanced to the finals by defeating Dorothy Kirby, Atlanta, Georgia State champion, 3 and 2. Miss Didrikson won over Jane Cothran, 2 and 1.

Juniors Seeks Sponsors.

Undercover Work by Colonial Baseball Players

George Washington's baseball players really suffered for their alma mater yesterday in bowing to Ohio State on the East Ellipse, 11-6. The weather, however, caused the Colonials more discomfort than the Buckeyes. It was so cold the boys took to their blankets. On the extreme left of the bench is Mrs. Edward K. Morris, wife of the team's coach and an ardent fan. Next in order are Sid Silkowitz, scoring; Assistant Coach Max Farrington, Jack Noonan and Bill Lanier. Reposing on the good earth are Kushman and Jones, while a couple of fair supporters stand behind.

G. W. High's Grid Team Has 11 Games

New Stadium Dedication Due Oct. 2; to Play Capital Schools.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Va., March 26.—The most ambitious football schedule ever carded by the George Washington High School has been listed for the 1937 season, it was announced today by Maurice Given, athletic director. The schedule includes ten games, five of which will be played away from home.

The Presidents will meet seven Virginia Class A Conference opponents, including Hampton High School's State championship Crabbers, and John Marshall High, runners-up for the Old Dominion title.

A highlight of the season is scheduled for October 2, at which the new G. W. stadium will be dedicated. Lane High, of Charlottesville, will provide the opposition, and a colorful program is planned.

The schedule:

September 25, John Marshall High at Richmond; October 2, Lane High, there; 9, Petersburg, there; 15, National Training School, here; October 22, Roosevelt High, here; 25, Washington and Lee, here.

November 6, Hampton High, there; 12, Hopewell High, there; 19, Fredericksburg, there; 25, Washington and Lee, here.

The movement to establish a municipal athletic park here, launched by Councilman Charles Burgess several days ago, has gained impetus with the indorsement of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce and the Young Democratic Club. Both have strongly allied themselves with Burgess on his proposal that property adjacent t the old almshouse be converted into a park.

Officials of the St. Mary's Celtics, the Kendrick semipro nine and many other senior and junior clubs in the city are planning to circulate a petition demanding immediate action from City Council on the matter. All are faced with the necessity of curtailing their baseball plans unless a suitable field is provided.

Ex-Cavalier Grid Star To Wed Woman Golfer

Philadelphia, March 26 (AP).—Edith Quier, of Reading, Pa., prominent woman golfer, announced today her engagement to Dr. Harrison Fitzgerald Flippin, of Charlottesville, Va., a resident physician at the University of Pennsylvania Hospital.

Miss Quier's championships included the Eastern State, Pennsylvania State and Philadelphia City. Dr. Flippin played football at the University of Virginia and later represented the Newark Athletic Club in track events.

Races to Pick America's Cup Defender Set

Series of 14 Events Will Decide on Yacht to Race Britain's.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 25.—Dates for the races which will decide the defender of the America's cup were announced today by George A. Cormack, secretary of the America's cup committee of the New York Yacht Club. The yacht chosen will race against the British challenger late this summer.

The trials will be divided into a preliminary series, the observation races and the trial races. The latter group will be held off Newport, R. I., over the America's cup courses commencing July 3 and continuing until a defender has been selected by the committee.

In 1934 Harold S. Vanderbilt's Rainbow defeated T. O. M. Sopwith's Endeavor in six races to retain the cup for the United States. Four victories out of seven races are necessary to take the cup, which Sir Thomas Lipton once called "the bloomin' mug."

Both Vanderbilt and Sopwith are building new yachts to enter this year's competition for selection of the defender and challenger, governed in the United States by the New York Yacht Club and abroad by the Royal Yacht Squadron.

The preliminary series will consist of approximately seven races off Newport. They will start May 29, when the owners or representatives of the yachts entered will report to the cup committee.

10 Yachts to Start Race From Florida to Havana

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 26 (AP). Skippers of ten trim sailing yachts, the smallest to enter a St. Petersburg-Havana race since 1932, eyed the skies tonight and prepared for rough weather in the eighth annual renewal of the Gulf racing classic.

Despite threatening weather, however, more than 25,000 persons are expected to line St. Petersburg's water front to watch the yachts jockey for the starting gun at noon tomorrow.

in the next inning and the left-handed Wade shut 'em out thereafter until he yielded to young Bob Logan in the sixth.

They didn't get a bing off Newsom until the fourth inning when Big Buck started experimenting with a sidearm curve that Gehringer swiped into right field for three bases, Laabs banged the same kind of a pitch for three bases to left and they had a 2-0 lead when Owen singled to center.

Wade's triple that started off the fifth was wasted when he tried to score on White's grounder to Bluege and was caught at the plate, but York came up with a triple against the left field fence in the sixth that scored Greenberg, who had walked.

Salveson, taking the mound in the seventh, pitched to White with one out and then was a victim of Millie's wild throw to second when White attempted to steal. The fleet Tiger continued to third and scored on Walker's fly to boost the Tigers' lead to 4-1.

An then the Nats began to get back in the ball game. Scoreless for five innings, they picked up a pair of runs when Bluege singled to center, Sington banged a triple over Simmons' head and Stone contributed a long fly.

In front now, 5-4, the Nats added their final run when Sington's fly scored Bluege from third.

Nats Play Cards Today.

The St. Louis Cardinals, twice the victims of the Nats during Washington's current seven-game winning streak, are scheduled for another battle with Bucky Harris' men on Tinker Field tomorrow.

The pitching team of Pete Appleton and Monte Weaver, who have turned in two of the Nats' victories in the Grapefruit League, will divide tomorrow's hurling assignment.

The two casualties on the Washington Club, Cecil Travis and Joe Kuhel, who were hit on the head by balls, are expected to rejoin the Nats' lineup.

Wrestling Tourney Shifted.

The District A. A. U. senior championships have been moved up until Tuesday and Wednesday, April 13, 14, it was announced last night. The matches will be held at the Jewish Community Center.

Buckeyes Step Out to Early Lead

Colonials' Hurlers Are Touched for 16 Hits; Play Often Delayed.

Competing against wind, sand and Ohio State, George Washington's baseball team made an inauspicious debut yesterday afternoon on the East Ellipse, where it succumbed to the little entente, 11-6, in a sorry excuse of a game.

The boys went through all the motions, but good, and at times even indifferent baseball was out of the question. Umpire "Ping" Purdy halted hostilities no less than a half dozen times while the young tornado sweeping the spacious playing field spent its fury. The breeze whipped up enough dust and sand to cover a small beach, almost totally obscuring players at times.

Ohio State put together 16 hits off the combined offerings of a couple of thoroughly chilled Colonial moundsmen, three walks and as many errors for their winning margin, while its host was being held well in hand with seven safeties. A big second inning, which accounted for six runs, gave the Buckeyes a running start toward victory, and a scattering of five more picked over the remainder of the distance clinched the decision.

George Washington made a gallant attempt to get back in the running, scoring twice in the third, once in the fifth and three times in the sixth, coming within a run of tying the game up at 7-all. But at this juncture State's defense tightened, the wind increased in volume and the Colonials consequently were buffeted into defeat. George Washington's inability to hit in the clutch proved to be its undoing, for no less than 11 runners were left high, dry and shivering on the hassocks.

Ohio started the second inning innocently enough as Conklin walked and Booth popped up to Tim Stapleton at third. But Washburn picked out one of De Angelis' fast ones and parked it deep in left centerfield for a triple. Wulfhorst followed with a single, scoring Washburn, but it looked as though the uprising was completely squelched when Caughlin rolled an easy one to "Moe" Berg at shortstop. Williams managed to drop his peg to second, however, and both men were safe.

Dagenhard added to De Angelis' woes by working him for an Annie Oakley, filling the bases, and Meyers didn't help matters with a clean drive to center that scored two of those on base. Raudabaugh's single, scoring Meyers, accounted for the sixth and final score.

Joe Brennan's line drive that warmed the atmosphere considerably on its flight to centerfield, scored Williams and DeAngelis for George Washington's first runs of the afternoon, but the batter was out trying to stretch the drive into a double. Williams reached first the hard way, taking a Dagenhard curve in the midriff, and DeAngelis had gained access to the bag through a fielder's choice.

The Colonials threatened again in the fifth, but only one run came of it, that by Stapleton, who singled and was doubled home by Zaleska. But in the sixth Coach Ed Morris' men got the ball rolling again, Zenowitz, pinch-hitting for Edmondson, starting things with a single to center. Dagenhard helped the rally by passing Berg and Nagy, filling the bases, and then walking Stapleton, who forced Zenowitz over the plate. Williams flied out, nobody scoring, before Johnson drew another base on balls, forcing Berg home. Two infield outs followed, with Nagy getting home with the third run on the first.

A crowd of about 500 fans braved the weather for the battle, which will be repeated this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock on the same field.

College Athlete's Fancy—Bosh!

By Lewis F. Atchison.

It's just too bad if a young man's fancy turns to affairs of the heart in the spring if said young man happens to be a candidate for a college team. The young lady can wait, for all the coaches care, while her swain sweats and struggles with a javelin, baseball bat, lacrosse pick and shovel or whatever implement is used in his particular line.

The pity of it all is that he toils in vain, insofar as the paying public is concerned, for when his team engages in actual competition the customers are notably absent. You could take the gross attendance, including contestants and officials, and the Dionne quintuplets probably would outnumber them. Spring sports in this vicinity are ignored as completely as the alternate delegate from Alaska at a cabinet meeting.

ATCHISON.

And as far as the gate receipts are concerned (for some schools actually attempt to extract a small fee from the fans) they wouldn't buy a stalk of celery at a free lunch counter. If it weren't for the big brother of all collegiate sport, football (that horrid game people actually pay to see) we suppose spring would be simply a season of birds and flowers and sap in trees—and elsewhere.

But the public must be pitied too, for it doesn't realize the fun it misses by studiously avoiding the campus show at this time of the year. Those who delight in seeing a couple of lightweights hammer two chapters of chemical knowledge out of one another in the boxing ring, would shriek in glee if they once saw a couple of tough lacrosse men working on a couple of equally tough opponents.

Those who like a close finish in basket ball possibly would get as much kick out of an exciting struggle to the wire in a good half-mile foot race. Or, perhaps, a closely contested pole vault or high jump, two events requiring the ultimate in skill, would interest them. In baseball they possibly might be fortunate enough to see a future Babe Ruth or "Dizzy" Dean beginning the long climb to the top and stardom, and when he had attained his goal could look back and say, "Why, I remember when . . ." one of humanity's most cherished but hackneyed phrases.

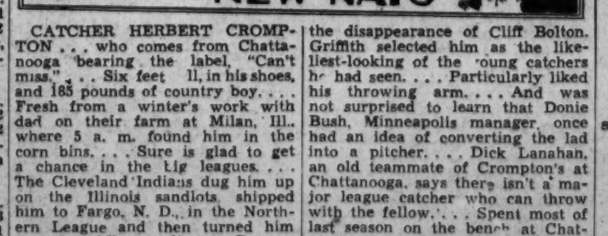
But do what they may, give almost their very life blood for the game, the boys seem unable to lure the fans out for an afternoon of good, clean and usually exciting sport. It seems to us that a breath of fresh air in the clear, warm sunshine, with the scent of new grass and budding flowers, and the throaty notes of songbirds would be enough to get them out; that the privilege of simply sitting in the stands enjoying nature at its best would be worth triple the price of admission.

But on second thought, maybe the customers have to work afternoons, in order to be customers at night. Which is, perhaps, just as well.

Johnny Gormley, Maryland's three-letter star who will be content with two this season, having abandoned baseball, is in a quandary. He happens to be the lone student in landscape gardening. Sometimes he forgets to attend class, and other times the professor forgets. Thus, when he appears the professor doesn't, and vice-versa. It's really very trying.

We hope the professor doesn't absent-mindedly hand Johnny an apple and graduate himself in June.

Joe Judge received the surprise of his life when he took over Georgetown's baseball team this spring and discovered they thought at least a dozen signals were required for a good offense. When the veteran first baseman gave them four simple signs you could have knocked the entire crowd down with one good swing of your old Louisville slugger.



CATCHER HERBERT CROMPTON . . . who comes from Chattanooga bearing the label, "Can't miss." . . . Six feet 11, in his shoes, and 185 pounds of country boy. . . . Fresh from a winter's work with dad on their farm at Milan, Ill., where 5 a. m. found him in the corn bins. . . . Sure is glad to get a chance in the big leagues. . . . The Cleveland Indians dug him up on the Illinois sandlots, shipped him to Fargo, N. D., in the Northern League and then turned him over to Minneapolis. . . . Became the property of Minneapolis when that club had a falling out in its working agreement with Cleveland. . . . Minneapolis loaned him to Chattanooga and Joe Engel bought him after watching him catch for a week. . . . That was in midseason of last year.

Owes his chance with the Nats to the disappearance of Cliff Bolton. Griffith selected him as the likeliest-looking of the young catchers he had seen. . . . Particularly liked his throwing arm. . . . And was not surprised to learn that Donie Bush, Minneapolis manager, once had an idea of converting the lad into a pitcher. . . . Dick Lanahan, an old teammate of Crompton's at Chattanooga, says there isn't a major league catcher who can throw with the fellow. . . . Spent most of last season on the bench at Chattanooga, took on weight and had a dismal batting average. . . . But the figure climbed when he played regularly and he finished up hitting .282. . . . Despite his success with Muddy Ruel, Griffith likes his catchers big, gained an instant affection for Crompton. . . . Bucky Harris is reserving opinion, but likes the lad's "action."

Minster's Fall Marks Best Event

By the Associated Press.

Tropical Park, Fla., March 26.—A spectacular spill marked the running of the fourth race on a featureless card here today. Mrs. Payne Whitney's Minster, favorite in a field of seven maiden 3-year-olds and upward of the male division, went down with Eddie Arcaro approaching the sixteenth post, horse and rider sprawling in a pool of water on the sloppy track. The 3-year-old gelding arose apparently uninjured and galloped off while Arcaro, one of the country's most highly regarded veterans, also regained his feet and escaped with a mud bath.

Cloverport, representing H. Friedberg, took the lead after the mishap and won by three lengths to pay $27.80. Foolem gained the place, a head before Charmed Circle. The race was run in a driving rain and the time for the six furlongs was 1:15 1-5.

Minster had started only twice before. That was as a juvenile. He faced topnotch juveniles at Saratoga last summer. His recent works were good and he went to the post at odds of $1.55 to $1.

Dashing right to the front, the son of Royal Minstral led into the stretch by daylight. As Cloverport moved up to challenge inside the last furlong, Minster, while a length in front, suddenly lost his footing in the slop. His knees buckled under him and Arcaro sailed off. Fortunately, horses galloped past them without touching the Greentree horse and rider and the crowd heaved a sigh of relief.

Twosome, a daughter of St. James—Deuce, outran a field of $1,200 3-year-old platers in the 6-furlong curtain raiser. With the improving Apprentice Mike Sarno doing the kicking, Twosome quickly sprinted into a comfortable advantage, racing Play Line into the ground. Slippery Jim closed gamely through the stretch and forced the winner to a drive before losing the purse by a length and a half. Day Dawn came from far out of it to annex the show, another length and a half behind. Twosome paid $12.60.

Me O My proved much too good for the sprinters in the second event. The 3-year-old son of Pennant graduated from the maiden ranks with five lengths to spare over the fast-closing Head Hunter, while the latter headed The Mayor for second money. Me O My put Town Crier away upon reaching the stretch and galloped away from the field to return $6.80. Robber Baron, close second choice to the winner, was slow to get into stride and wound up fourth.

After going winnerless since the Hialeah meeting, Mrs. Emil Denemark broke the spell when her 2-year-old Miss Collins survived a hard drive to win the third race for maiden fillies. The $25 for $2 shot broke in front from the inside position and gamely held to a narrow advantage over Toolittle all the way. The long shot was saddled by "Big Bert" Michell, who enjoyed his first success of the meeting the previous day.

Indians Meet Senator, Reveal Real Subsidizing

'Chief Charley' Guyon Discusses Grid With His Tribesmen.

By John R. Vosburgh.

Hobnobbing with Senators and Congressmen was directly in Chief Charley Guyon's line, Thursday night. The one-time Chippewa papoose, now better known as Eastern High's jolly baseball coach, started out as host to fellow Chippewas from the reservation and ended up swapping stories with members of Congress.

The Chief handled himself with the utmost diplomacy, however. His fellow tribesmen had been invited to a sort of Wisconsin reception in the Senate Office Building and the Chief went along. Before he knew it he was posing for a picture with Senator F. Ryan Duffy, of Wisconsin.

Especially proud of the athletic status of his Chippewas, the Chief had a big evening going over the days when he played football for Pop Warner at Old Carlisle. Four of his ruddy friends were former stars at Hampton, Haskell, Carlisle and other schools but the foremost figure of all was chieftain-like, cigar-smoking Thomas L. St. Germain.

Mr. St. Germain revealed an athletic past which would amaze the most subsidized college athlete who ever accepted free schoolbooks. A full-fledged lawyer and only Indian who ever played football for Yale, St. Germain came to Washington as counselor for his Lac du Flambeau branch of the Chippewas who have some grievances to make about their Wisconsin reservation.

Attorney St. Germain, who once coached at Villanova, tells how both Pop Warner, of Carlisle, and Coach McCoy, of Yale, looked upon his prowess as a 230-pound tackle with coveting eye.

"I was all ready to go to Yale from Haskell, where I was captain, than one day I ran into Pop Warner. 'Tom,' he says, 'you're going to play for me now and sure enough he made me give up Yale and play tackle on the same team with Jim Thorpe.

"After that I went to Yale and started waiting on table. One day Coach McCoy came in and said he could fix it so I wouldn't have to wait on table any more. He put me on the training table. I coached the line a year and played the next year.

"One day we were scrimmaging against a bunch of alumni including Pudge Heffelfinger, who had graduated a little while before, the greatest guard of all time. 'Let's see you get him out of there,' McCoy told me.

"I was college wrestling champion and he knew how strong I was. On the next play I picked Pudge Heffelfinger up and slammed him down again. Heffelfinger got up, scratched his head and yelled: 'Boy, how many more years you got on this team.'"

Mellon's Horse Choice In Camden Cup Race

Camden, S. C., March 26 (AP).—Richard K. Mellon's big bay gelding, Escape III, already winner in his first two starts of the season, was heavily favored tonight to take the Carolina Cup Steeplechase, 3 miles over timber, feature event of the Camden races here tomorrow.

Dear Al, Selections at Tropical Park.

I came to the conclusion several days ago, but I bided my time before I placed it in the public print, that Clocker Mike is up to his old tricks of jinxing me. It will be recalled, and I can prove it, that my selections were going pretty well before that friend of mine discovered Clocker Mike washing dishes in that Greek lunchroom at Waycross, Ga. Since Mike returned to my camp, I haven't done anything right. If I pick them they run out and if I don't pick them they come sailing home. I lay off this jockey because he has been riding poorly and he suddenly does an about face and boots them home. I disregard the Denemark horses because they have been failing and up they pop. If I get rid of Mike it probably will be hard luck and if I keep him it probably will be hard luck. I'm between the sweat and the perspiration. There is one consolation, Mike can't jinx me here much longer and perhaps the change of scenery at Bowie will mean a change of luck. If you're still interested in that terrible system of his, he likes Chancer for

On the Air Today

The microphones of the networks will follow the sun across the country Easter morning and inasmuch as several of the programs will be presented at a very early hour, they are offered in this Saturday space. I'm afraid that by the time many of us are looking at the Sunday Post these very early programs will have passed into the outermost regions of the radio ether.

The following have been scheduled by WJSV, WMAL and WRC for period before 8 a. m. Programs beginning at that hour will be found as usual on The Sunday Post radio pages. WOL has no programs scheduled earlier than 8 o'clock.

WRC and WJSV will open up 5 a. m., to present Easter Pontifical High Mass in St. Peter's Cathedral, by short wave from Rome. At 6:30, WRC presents the Easter benediction of Pope Pius. WJSV's broadcast extends through this period.

At 7, WJSV presents a sunrise service from Philadelphia; at 7:30, from St. Louis. WRC also presents the St. Louis service at 7:30. WMAL, at 7:30fi airs the sunrise service from Soldiers' Field, Chicago.

English Music Hall—Variety from London, beloved by Britons for centuries, by short wave, WRC, at 3:30. Artists include Elsie and Doris Walters; Clapham and Dwyer, Western Brothers, Alexander and Mose and others.

Grace Moore—Sings "Bird Song," from "Pagliacci;" "Our Song," from "When You're in Love," and "Play, Gypsy, Play." WJSV, at 9.

Stuart Erwin—Heads guests in "Chateau," with Joe Cook, WRC, at 9:30. Also Toscha Seidel, Dale Carnegie, Eddie Dowling and Ray Dooley, Alex Templeton, and Notre Dame Glee Club.

Here and there: Rudy Vallee will present two of his "Varieties" from London in May. The American crooner crosses for the Coronation ceremonies and his hour will be short-waved to the United States, on May 6 and 13 . . . "Your Unseen Friend" was another program rewritten at a late moment last week as the result of the Texas school disaster. A school sequence was taken out . . . "Lum and Abner" are back in Chicago for a couple weeks . . . Try "The Johnson Family" some afternoon, WOL, at 5:15. It's a remarkable job of characterization and multi-voice use—all done by one man.

The urge to write songs is not confined to Tin Pan Alley—or to bright young men who want to get a toehold on the famous "Alley." Kate Smith regularly receives mails from prominent business and professional men urging her to use a ditty just turned out by said brass hat. However, Kate has stopped using unpublished songs. Plagiarism suits are too easily instituted for that. It is interesting to recall, though, that many months ago Kate received letters from Gov. Nice of Maryland, and Mayor Jackson, of Baltimore, urging that she introduce a tune written by Billy Mayhew, a Baltimorean. . had been privately published, so Kate sang it. That song did all right, too. It was "It's a Sin to Tell a Lie."

Skilled Workers Needed by Industry

New York, March 26.—A scarcity of highly-skilled craftsmen already exists in the metal-working industries and is becoming increasingly acute, according to a study made public today by the National Industrial Conference Board. Reports from companies in other industries including textiles, paper, printing, and lumber, indicate that in some sections there is a definite scarcity of certain types of labor, but that labor shortage has not yet become as serious a problem as in the metal-working industries.

The conference board's survey of conditions in the metal-working industries covered 404 companies employing approximately 467,200 workers. Of these companies, 21.4 per cent reported no skilled labor shortage; 26.5 per cent indicated that a serious scarcity of such labor existed, and 52.2 per cent reported that they had found it impossible to secure competent craftsmen to fill jobs that were open. This last group of 211 companies would employ a total of 7,158 additional skilled craftsmen if they could be found.

Railway Wages Higher.

New York, March 26 (AP).—The average annual earnings of railway employes in 1936 was $1,734, an increase of 5 per cent over the previous year and 20 per cent over 1933, Railway Age reported today. Executives, officials and staff assistants received an average of $5,565.

Easter Lifts Trade To Peak for Year

New York, March 26 (AP).—The final surge of Easter shopping carried retail sales to a new high for the year this week, Dun & Bradstreet said today in the Weekly Review.

Other divisions of business were less unanimous in trend. Wholesale markets were less active with attention centered chiefly on making immediate shipments of last-minute rush orders, and industrial operations were hampered by the spread of unsettled labor difficulties, the agency reported.

"Final preparations for the gay Easter parade provided such a strong propellant that consumer buying rose above unfavorable weather and other retardants," the review said. "The call for women's dresses, suits, coats, shoes and fur scarfs gathered force steadily, while sales of clothes for youngsters rose to a second-year high for the period.

Gold and Silver Imports.

By the Associated Press.

The Commerce Department said yesterday that gold imports increased about $4,000,000 during the week ended March 19. For the week, imports totaled $33,831,284, compared with $29,687,158 in the previous week. Silver imports were listed at $1,090,017 and $1,367,816 for the respective weeks, while silver exports aggregated $72,385 and $12,359.

U. S. Re-enters Wheat Trade As Exporter

Shipment to Rotterdam Is First Since Last Autumn.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 26.—Actual shipment of 100,000 bushels of wheat from the Pacific Coast, marking reentry of the United States into world wheat export trade, was reported today by the Farmers National Grain Corporation. The first business of this kind since last fall, the wheat shipment was destined for Rotterdam. The transaction was made through brokers at London.

According to C. E. Huff, president of Farmers National, more grain would have been shipped had it not been for the shortage of space. He said the organization expected to move wheat in quantity for export during the summer and early fall if there are no further upsets in foreign exchange conditions and if the yield of winter wheat is anywhere near normal. The grain trade had reports Monday of the export sales of 300,000 bushels of United States wheat from the Northwest.

Heavy Sales Expected.

The return of American farmers to their old role of wheat exporters, even months before harvest of the new 1937 crop, was regarded in the grain trade as a prelude to possible heavy overseas shipments later in the year. Many trade authorities have predicted such an eventuality for 1937. Traders said recent sharp advances in foreign wheat prices to the highest levels in eight to 11 years laid the basis of favorable adjustment between domestic and foreign prices.

Grain traders regarded news of the shipment also as new proof of the scarcity of wheat in Europe and the length to which importing countries are willing to go to build up immediate reserves.

Recent market advices have indicated that Argentina, which in the last few months has been the chief source of supply, is running short of exportable wheat.

Some traders believe that when new United States wheat becomes available in July this country will have the export market practically to itself.

Eight-Ounce Baby Survives 18 Hours, Baffling Science

New York, March 26 (AP).—Weighing a scant 8 ounces, an infant boy died tonight after 18 hours of life and defiance of all available, authenicated medical records.

He was prematurely born by five months. His chances of surviving, medical authorities agreed, were "utterly nothing." His tiny head was the size of a small red apple. The spark of life was so faint he could not be removed from his incubator for weighing.

Sometimes six-month babies survive with the aid of an incubator. But four-month babies, never. Still, hour after hour the tiny heart kept beating.

Coast Iron, Steel Industry Discussed

By the United Press.

Arms rivalry in Europe and high activity in the steel industry combined yesterday to stir official interest in the practicability of a Pacific Coast iron and steel industry using electric furnaces and employing raw materials from Asia.

A reliable source indicated three expert reports of recent date have given attention to the iron ore resources of countries around the Pacific, particularly the Philippines.

The new economic situation tied in with the proposed expert studies here regarding a Philippines economic setup which might support independence earlier than the 1946 date fixed in the present independence law.

Come out Easter Sunday and join the throngs of Nature lovers who will greet Spring in glorious Cedar Hill . . . Washington's most beautiful Cemetery.

Budding flowers and trees, grass-carpeted slopes and valleys, artistic rock gardens, picturesque lakes and sparkling streams . . . will lure you over miles of winding paved roads through a natural tree-sheltered wonderland.

You'll also want to see the famous Annie Laurie Wishing Chair, California Redwood Tree, Rustic Bridge, Cloister Mausoleum and other artistic creations.

Drive out Pennsylvania Avenue S.E. direct to Cedar Hill Cemetery. Gates open until 7:30 p.m.

The New Cloister Mausoleum Now Being Landscaped

This architectural gem has been created as a fitting tribute to departed loved ones. It answers for all time the eternal question of where and how to provide a perfect resting place . . . permanent, dignified, secluded, intimate, yet ever available to those who care.

Its matchless planning affords single crypts, lounge crypts, companion crypts, family sections, a non-sectarian chapel, modern Crematorium and Columbarium.
